The Lincoln Plan

Lincoln's biographers are quoted as saying that the Civil War President proposed a plan of his own whereby the South would be lent $600,000,000 for reconstruction. The plan was dropped as if it were a hot potato when every member of Lincoln's cabinet opposed it.

Whatever Mr. Lincoln's motives were, political or sympathetic, it is well established that the cabinet had no sympathy for the South, that the foundation for a tough and lopsided economy was forged for the South. Unfortunately, with a few brief periods, that tough policy has been maintained for the South, not necessarily by northerners but by economic royalists in and out of the South.

No doubt but what a loan to the South when it lay prostrate at the end of the Civil War would have taken much of the sting out of the suffering and misery experienced by a helpless people. With their bare hands, the people of the South laid the foundation for a new and better economy. It has progressed, but its advance to full bloom, blocked first by a refusal of a loan, has been retarded by shackles applied by ruthless economic royalists.

Lincoln's cabinet, it is estimated, was under no obligation to the stricken South at the close of the Civil War. It is pointed out, however, that the North and economic royalists have no right to hold the South in shackles. In addition to being denied help when help would have meant so much, the South was straddled with freight rate differentials. Its human workers were exploited in the factories and mills while northern capital fattened on big profits. Prices for what the South bought were fixed in the North and prices for what the South sold were fixed in the North. While the South produced, the North gambled on what was produced. Today, tobacco, one of the big crops, is taxed all out of proportion, the producer being obliged to take less money in the interest of others.

Yes, the South was kicked in the face when it re-entered the Union, and it has been treated as a stepchild ever since.

A Bible and a newspaper in every home, a good school in every district—all studied and appreciated as they merit—are the principal support of virtue, morality and civil liberty.—Selected.

A Timely Prayer

Dr. Peter Marshall, United States Senate chaplain, offered a timely prayer in an almost empty chamber of the august senate a short time ago when he asked Divine guidance on the world's "true" problems:

"The problem of lying, which is called propaganda; the problem of selfishness, which is called self-interest; the problem of greed, which is often called profit; the problem of license disguising itself as liberty; the problem of lust, masquerading as love; the problem of materialism, the hook which is baited with security."

The chaplain's prayers, limited ordinarily to two or three short paragraphs, are said by some to be more profound than senators' three-hour speeches.

Dr. Marshall who gained the position of Senate chaplain by a political maneuver which ousted another, preached in the Williamston Presbyterian Church several years ago.

Political Bread

Christian Science Monitor

A crust of bread freely shared can be a benediction. A fat loaf given as a bribe will be bitter in the eating.

Chester Bowles, chairman of the International Advisory Council of the United Nations Appeal for Children, has found the common people of Europe full of distaste for the "political bread" they must eat. France and Italy, he points out, are being saved by American grain, Poland and Czechoslovakia by Soviet grain. Political trends determine who gets what from whom, and the eaters must bob and be grateful. As Mr. Bowles says:

They must have food at any cost but they are bitter at having to swallow the hammer and sickle or the American eagle to get it.

Americans reared in a tradition of independence should be the first to understand this. The spontaneous gratitude which has greeted such gifts as they have sent freely, generously, and without political strings tells its own story. Contempt offers a bribe; faith holds out nourishment.

May Be a Liability

Hertford County Herald

For months North Carolinians have been informed that State Treasurer Charles Johnson had the inside track in the next gubernatorial race. We have been told at length and frequently that all of the so-called county machines and court house folks were behind the Raleigh man's candidacy.

Now ex-Commissioner of Agriculture Kerr Scott has thrown his hat into the race and the picture if not altered, must be viewed from a different angle and with a lot more light.

Scott, a "formidable candidate" in the words of a local politician, will no doubt reason that the power of the court house and county machines—considerable as it may be—does not actually control the electorate in North Carolina.

The fact that so much space has been given Johnson in that direction is likely to prove a boomerang in a race in which men of the same personal potential are involved.

Many people will come to resent the implication that the county machine will determine just who is to be the next governor of our state.

Instead of being the positive asset, so often pointed out, these prior commitments to Johnson are more likely to prove a liability.

If you have known how to compose your life, you have accomplished a great deal more than the man who knows how to compose a book.—Montaigne (1533-1592).
