Oleologging

Even in Wisconsin, the original home of "protection" for the dairying industry, there is rebellion against unreasonable high taxes on oleomargarine.

In Wisconsin unreasonable State taxes are piled onto unreasonable Federal taxes and the result is that margarine sells for about the same price as butter. It has now developed that margarine is being bootlegged into Wisconsin from Illinois — although either the buying or selling of untaxed margarine is a high crime in Wisconsin. The practice has become so widespread that a new word, "oleologging," has been coined for it.

Congress should end the margarine taxes at this session. Even the people of Wisconsin are sick of them.—News and Observer.

Are You "Big Time"?

By Ruth Taylor Once I wrote an article about the public relations man in the circus and why he was called The Front Door. The other day when I was talking with the editor who gave me that slogan, I noted that, in his vivid circus lingo, he classified people into whether or not they were "big-time". When I asked why, he explained that he meant they were not merely performers who landed in the top shows, but those whose work was well above the average. Who could carry the load of a big job. Who were good enough for the big shows. Who, in short, were "big-time".

Can you go on working when circumstances are against you? When there is a job to be done, do you stick at it, regardless of your own personal plans? Do you do what you set out to do? Do you finish each program you start? Do you practice to perfect yourself in your chosen work? In the circus they learn how to keep on learning.

How do you stack up on team work? Can you work with others only when you are bossing the show? Or can you do your share of the menial tasks with a willing spirit? My sloganer said: "They are all producers in the circus—perhaps because they all ride elephants in the parade." That is, no matter what their specialty, or how good they are, they aren't too big to join the parade and take their place in the line of march.

Let's carry it a little further. How generous are you of yourself? Do you take time to be kind and considerate of those around you? A man is known by the courtesy he shows to lesser folk. Are you measured in speech, strong to condemn evil, but wary of hurting with the careless word or laughing phrase that bears a hidden barb? Do you deal in false generalities or do you seek for accuracy—and keep still when you haven't the facts?

The men who are big are the men with time to give to others. They have not waited for their opportunities. They have sought them and made them. They have done their work, and done it well, so that there are no loose ends to serve as time-takers. They do not have to stand upon their rights. They look rather for the privilege of service. They are too big to be petty—in anything. And, whatever their station in life, they are recognized for what they are—big-time.

Bad Timing

Tobacco growers said little at the time but they were a bit skeptical about the timing of the announced reduction in tobacco acreages last year. The crop had been marketed and the reduced allotments did not influence prices. Possibly the reduction is influencing prices now, but instead of waiting until after the marketing season this year the U. S. Department of Agriculture comes out and announces an increased allotment for 1949. What effect, if any, the announcement will have on the markets remains to be seen, but from the farmer's standpoint he is of the opinion that he has been attacked from both sides.

FROM THE BAKERY!

This fashionable midriff play-suit, worn by a beautiful vacationer at a Western resort, came not from an exclusive dress shop or fashion salon—but from a bakery! A local baker laundered his empty 100-pound printed cotton flour bags and put them on sale as inexpensive sewing material for his customers. With four of the sacks, this young lady created a colorful play-time outfit for her vacation wardrobe.

Calif. Flag Up Day and Night

Colton, Calif.—A large American flag atop nearby Mt. Slover is one of three in the nation authorized to fly 24 hours a day. The flag was mounted first during World War I as a patriotic gesture and has flown the clock around for the past 31 years except during stormy weather.

Approximately 15 by 22 feet, the flag can be seen for more than 40 miles on clear days and is illuminated by floodlights at night. The flag is replaced every six weeks.

The other two places where a flag is displayed day and night are above the national capitol in Washington and over the grave of Francis Scott Key, composer of "The Star Spangled Banner," in Frederick, Md.

THANKS

The Harrison Oil Company is most grateful to Williamston firemen and all others who moved over to Windsor late Monday night to render aid during the fire that threatened its properties.

It was this aid and that offered by others that possibly prevented a disastrous fire and held the company's loss to around $10,000 which was not covered by insurance.
