Sports Slaughter

Bull fighting and a few other sports have been frowned down upon and ruled out in this country as being too cruel, but each year hundreds of thousands of fans whoop, shout and yell when fifteen football players are fatally injured and many others are maimed for life each season.

As numbers go, fifteen aren't many, but as long as one life is lost something should be done to enhance the safety of all players. It just doesn't quite add up even when millions are spent to eliminate killing and maiming on highways and in factories and the slaughter and maiming of youth on the gridiron are accepted.

Room For Improvement All Around

A fairly recent survey of rural households in eastern North Carolina reveals some startling facts. While the white owners hold some advantage over the colored tenant, both of them are victims either of a cruel economic system or of their own shiftlessness.

To read the survey report one is convinced that too much criticism has been directed about the treatment of the colored race and not enough has been said about the treatment received by both white and colored at the hands of those who set the prices for what the farmer produces and what the farmer buys.

There have been marked improvements in recent years, and the survey shows that the colored race has progressed possibly at a greater ratio than the white. It is admitted, however, that there's room for more improvement all around.

Picking out a few of the pertinent facts in the survey, one finds that about 87 percent of white householders had radios and that radios were in 74 percent of the colored homes. Seventy-five percent of the white householders had autos and forty-five percent of the colored families had cars. Just about fifty percent had electric lights, and less than a third had mechanical refrigerators.

A Dark Future With Dewey

With Dewey and a Republican Congress in power, the South can look forward to a doubtful and dark future. The die is being cast, and the wolves are anxiously waiting for the first piece of pie.

Agriculture has been assured price supports in a weak and indirect fashion, Dewey and his forces saying they favor price supports but not control that supports the price support.

It will be recalled that Mr. Dewey vigorously opposed equal freight rates for the South.

The Republicans are figuring night and day to knock out the last vestiges of competition and restore monopoly.

Federal regulatory agencies will be attacked and wiped out.

Power expansion programs will reverse their order and shrink.

World trade is certain to be knocked unconscious by the tariff blocks.

The atomic energy program for which the taxpayers were called upon to spend two billion dollars is subject to be turned over to private interests with greedy hands.

Truman and the Democrats have muddled some issues, but their record will look unblemished compared with the muddle the voters will create by supporting either Dewey, Thurmond or Wallace.

Herbert Hoover says the U. S. cabinet must be enlarged and "the president must be relieved of a large amount of his administrative duties." Hoover ought to be an expert along that line as he was relieved of all his duties as president.

The duty of a judge is to render justice; his art is to delay it.—Jean de la Bruyere.
