Everybody's Official

When the nominees are named and elected, the winners should recognize that they belong to all the people. And the people, regardless of who they voted for, should regard their officers, representatives and senator as their own. Whoever is elected enters office by a majority, it is true, but the elected should remember that they are to respect the minority along with the majority. The people should remember that those who are elected should receive consideration that goes with the respective of-

Political campaigns are good in that they create interest in government. Unguarded words and heated arguments should not linger after the close of the campaign, but all should reform their ranks and march forward in harmony and peace.

The particular candidate of our choice may not win, but once nominated and elected he belongs to all of us, and we solemnly accept the responsibility of fair citizens to respect the office and lend a helping hand when to do so the interests of the county, state, nation and all the people are advanc-

The Witches Ride Again

Back in the seventeenth century a small group of neurotic teen-agers developed hvsterical fits, and apeared possessed of the devil. They accused others of being witches, claiming they had been afflicted by the magic spell. The youngsters, out of spite or hate or a publicity craze, accused innocent persons of being witches.

An humble, God-fearing grandmother by the name of Rebecca Nurse, was removed from a sick bed and carried away to be hanged. Little children were confined in dark prisons as bedeviled. Others were burned at the stake.

Most of the terrifying and black business was centered in Massachusetts. How unfounded, cruel and ridiculous it all appears

But in Washington and North Carolina, the politicians for fame, fancy or political reasons are today yelling "witch," and resorting to character assassination. With a return to fairness and reason, the charges will be placed in the same category now occupied by the witch charges of two hundred

But the practice today in our period of self-claimed enlightenment is more profoundly confounding, detestable and regrettable

Hope They Succeed

Three great missions were launched in the world a short time ago, and time only will tell if they meet with success or failure.

Trygve Lie, Secretary General, went to Moscow to save the United Nations. Dean Acheson, Secretary of State, went to Europe to save the Atlantic Pact. And President Harry Truman went west to save the Administration.

At least two strikes had been called on all three missionaries before they started. The Communists had long been throwing curves to Mr. Lie. Outside the munitions makers and a few others, the economy-minded were digging away at the Atlantic Pact foundation. And the Republicans haven't stopped sniping and attacking the Democrats in five generations.

. All three of the men have important missions, but they have a determined and combined opposition: those who claim they can do it better and those who want none of it.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well; and doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame. -Longfellow.

Nobody Seems Innocent

Joseph Alsop, who contributes comment on public affairs to this page, apparently finds it impossible to confine his feelings to WILLIAMSTON MORTH CAROLINA TO THE STORY OF LANGUAGE DE LA COURSE DE SENATOR MChis accustomed forum. He has taken pen to Owen Lattimore, accused by Senator Me-Carthy of Communist leanings. The result

> The man who tries to prove guilt by association of ideas, Mr. Alsop demonstrates, is likely to find himself on absurdly shaky ground. For example, it would not be hard to show by this process that Senator Wherry, official leader of Senate Republicans and a noisy defender of the McCarthy charges against the State Department, has voted on almost every issue of foreign policy straight down the Communist party line.

Mr. Alsop raises this point not only as to Senator Wherry but also as to Senators Mc-Carthy and Taft.

The Soviet line runs naturally in opposition to items like aid to Greece and Turkey, peacetime selective service for the United States, the Atlantic Pact, the Marshall Plan and its later organization in ERP and ECA; and the proposal of military aid and pledges of defense for the pact nations. On every one of these items, the Wherry position as established by his vote is identical with the Communists,' as Mr. Alsop writes in his let-

We shall have to abandon hope of having honest and courageous public services, Mr. Alsop says, "if mere mistakes of judgment are later to be transformed into evidences of disloyalty."-Louisville Courier-Journal.

Is This Infanticide?

Christian Herald

A trial balance on television, struck recently in a searching editorial from the pen of Norman Cousins in the Saturday Review of Literature, leaves television deep in the Christian Herald is concerned and troubled. The issues involved are great. They go to the heart of the home life of America. They strike deep into social, moral and spiritual values. To evade them now will accumulate graver troubles for the future.

Among the illustrations cited by Norman Cousins are these two. In a Boston suburb a 9-year-old boy reluctantly showed his father a report card heavily decorated with red marks. He then proposed one way of getting out of the embarrassment: they could give the teacher a box of poisoned chocolates for Christmas; "It's easy, Dad, they did it on television last week. A man wanted to kill his wife, so he gave her candy with poison in it and she didn't know who did it."

From Brooklyn comes this story of a 6year-old who asked his policeman father for real bullets because his little sister "doesn't die for real when I shoot her, like they do when Hopalong Cassidy kills them." For good measure I add the story of a housemaid who caught a 7-year-old sprinkling ground glass into the family's lamb stew. It was purely an experiment inspired by normal curiosity to learn whether it would really work as well as it did on television.

Norman Cousin's editorial is comprehensive. He does not argue for "highbrowism" or for the conversation of TV into an "extension of the classroom." He is for entertainment. Also he sees"chinks of light in the tunnel," though he concludes-and with him we agree-that "for every half-hour worth seeing there are literally days of wrath and writhing."

Here is what someone has named a "billion-dollar blunder" that has begun to put skids under Hollywood, that has disfigured much of radio but that has to date used the same shifting sands for the foundations of TV. The editor of the Saturday Review of Literature is of the opinion that television is being murdered in its cradle by its own parents. If the reponsible parties really want the baby to grow up, they had better loosen their grip on the child's throat!

Invited

To what extent and by whatever methods the federal government may have employed in moving in on or infringing upon State government or rights, one thing is certain that Big Papa is being invited into the states to help battle crime.

Such antics as the gambling syndicates in a dozen or more states, murder in Kansas City and so on are serving as a strong vacuum to literally suck in Uncle Sam's forces.

Crime conditions, breaking all records, demand action from every level, all of which would give the liquor folks a perfect haven to yap-yap if prohibition was in existence.

Tell All The Facts

The National City Bank of New York recently completed a survey of the meat packing business, and found that the low cost is not equalled in any society whether capitalistic, socialistic or communist.

That's very interesting, but why couldn't the bank extend its survey to determine why meats still cost so much when the animals leave the farm at below cost of produc-

As parents of a member of the 4-H Club for several years, we firmly believe that we all should begin to think of the man that thinks of us. Henry Johnson, a candidate for Sheriff of Martin County, who has sold the fat stock 4-H sales for several years without charge.

We went fishing and eaught an IDEA

A fishing trip serves as a darned good way to catch up on your thinking. We know that, for we went fishing and caught an idea - one which we are going to use. There is too much looking over insurance and making policies the starting point of an insurance program. That is wrong - hazards, the hazards which surround our clients, form the proper starting point. Which ones are the greatest? Which ones should be first insured against? These are the important questions.

CAMPEN

SAM M.

Alliance, N. C.

FARMER

MERCHANT

Experience in 1949 Session Prepared Him For a More Beneficial Service in 1951!

Educated at Trinity College, now Duke University, class 1910 Senator Campen was the first Pamheo County citizen to serve in the State Senate in nearly 50 years. He served on the following Committees in 1949: Roads, Appropriations, Fisheries, Water Commerce, Wild Life and others. He is a Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner. Served ten years as a member of the Pamlico County Board of Education, eight years as chairman.

Sam Campen is a fine gentleman. He is a farmer and small merchant. He stands for the same things that we stand for in Martin County.

Every since 1910 he has worked in Pamlico County for Martin County candidates' for the senate. He worked for Harry Stubbs, Clayton Moore, Elbert S. Peel, Robert L. Coburn and Hugh G. Horton. Pamlico County went strong for everyone of these candidates. It would seem to me that we should support Sam Campen Saturday.

In this race you have to vote for two candidates. Everyone in Martin County should and will vote for Hugh Horton. When you vote for Hugh Horton vote for Sam Campen also.
