

Treatment Listed For Heat Illness

High temperatures and the rush of summer work make it easy to be overcome by any of several forms of heat illness, County farmers were warned this week by the State College Extension Service.

It was explained that sunstroke follows prolonged exposure to the sun, whereas heatstroke is caused by excessive heat with or without exposure to the sun. The effects are the same and either may be fatal.

Symptoms are hot and dry skin, face red and flushed, breathing hard and loud, pupils enlarged, and, in some cases, unconsciousness.

Prevention is the best cure but everyone should know what to do in case heat illness does strike. Here is what the National Safety Council suggests for sunstroke or heatstroke:

1. Move patient to a cool, shady place, strip to the underclothes, lay on back with head and shoulders raised.

2. Apply ice or cold wet cloths to head, cool the body gradually with a cool bath or with a hose or wet clothes and rub limbs toward the heart.

3. After treating for several minutes, stop and observe patient. If skin becomes hot again, resume treatment.

4. If patient is conscious, give cool drinks, not ice cold. Do not give stimulants.

5. Get patient to a doctor or a hospital as soon as possible. Continue the treatment in the ambulance.

In cases of heat exhaustion, the patient's skin is cold and clammy. A simple rule may serve as a guide and prevent confusion as to treatment: If the patient is cold, make him warm; if he's hot, make him cool.

Farmers Showing Interest In Geese

While commercial production of geese is not practiced to any great extent at present, many North Carolina farmers are showing increasing interest in this fowl, says R. S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at State College. Dearstyne says his department in recent weeks has received correspondence concerning geese from all sections of the State. This awakening interest, he adds, may lead to a new infant industry in North Carolina.

Geese usually are raised in small numbers on general farms,

The Agriculture Department can't order the curbs without Congressional authority. The stalemate may doom potato price props by the year's end, since it doesn't look as though the lawmakers will get around to providing the necessary sanction.

A farmer having failed to catch a boy who had been picking apples from one of his best trees, tried a change of tactics. "Come here, little man," he said in a wheedling voice. "I want to tell you something." "No, No," shouted the boy. "Little fellows like me don't need to know everything."

Report Increase In Peanut Prices

Total commercial holdings of 438 million pounds (farmers' stock equivalent basis), down a year before. Although total disappearance of shelled peanuts is likely to be below last season, consumption of edible shelled peanuts will probably show a small increase.

Prices of Virginias are now well above this time last year with some grades up 30 to 40 per cent. Growers are permitted to exceed the quotas this year with the understanding that the excess peanuts will be sold for oil if edible markets cannot be found. It seems likely that most excess Virginias can be sold at the edible price next season.
