Old Axiom Is True As Ever

New York.—For a while this year it looked as though at least one economic axiom no longer held true: the one that says neither farmers nor city folk can prosper long separately. According to winter and spring forecasts by many economists, 1950 was to be a year of depression for the farmer, of continuing good times for his city cousin. It doesn't look that way today. Unless the Korean war throws the entire economy out of whack, farm folk will have prosperity this year too. Overall national figures show a dip in farm income to date, but the trend appears to have turned up again.

Agricultural economists are now predicting that the Department of Agriculture will have to revise earlier estimates that 1950 rural income would sink 17 percent below 1949 levels. In Indiana—a typical corn-hog-cattle producing area in the great midwest "breadbasket region"—farm equipment sales (a good barometer to farm prosperity) are definitely on the upgrade. One dealer reported an 80 percent sales gain in May over the same month of 1949. Good volume for tractors, corn planters, and similar machinery was also maintained all through June. "Farmers seem to have changed their minds about conditions," says this dealer. "I don't know whether it's fear of inflation, or the war scare, or what it is. But they're coming in and laying down the cash."

That this is no isolated case seems evident from the following summary of the situation by Iowa State College: "A boomlet . . . a dose of mild inflation . . . the outlook is good."

Master File Of The Racketeers

A master file of all prominent racketeers is being prepared by Senate crime investigators in Washington, it was announced recently. Chairman Kefauver stated that a special committee of the Senate is engaged in compiling a file, cross-indexed, which little by little may piece together a pattern of how these crime operations interlock. Senators can cross check the records of every suspected operator in the world of gambling, narcotics, and other illegal interests. Investigators will use the records to trace the way the underworld operates. The Senate Appropriations Committee made public confidential testimony of F. B. I. Director J. Edgar Hoover, saying that local and national crimes have increased a great deal. Mr. Hoover said that "our crime picture today reflects a much more serious problem than during the pre-war years"

This chic lass takes a cue from the cowboys and wears a Western style kerchief at her neckline. Her dress and matching kerchief are created from sheer swaggar ginghams in neat checks by Gale and Lord. Gingham is more popular for cool summer frocks than ever before, according to National Cotton Council fashion experts.

A large percentage of certain crimes are being committed by youths under twenty-one. He added that youths under twenty-one are responsible for 43.9 percent of all automobile thefts, 38.5 percent of all burglaries, 30.4 percent of the rapes, and a fourth of all robberies and larcenies.
