Hog Cholera Virus A Tricky Traveler

Accusing fingers have been pointed to everything from buzzards to wagon wheels as spreaders of hog cholera, but nobody yet knows the whole story of how this tricky and deadly disease travels around.

Writing in the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association, Dr. A. H. Quin of Kansas City, Mo., said that over 70 years of study has brought to light many important facts about hog cholera and that the means by which this disease could be eradicated are now known.

But investigators who have attempted to trace its spread from one place to another have often ended up in a dizzy whirl, he said. It was once thought that farm pigeons had a lot to do with spreading it, Dr. Quin said, but controlled experiments have disproved that belief.

He explained that the hog cholera virus can live in unburied carcasses for months during cold weather but that it is destroyed in a matter of hours or days in decomposing carcasses during hot weather.

There is evidence that flies, crows, buzzards, roving dogs, the hoofs of horses, wagon wheels, trucks, and even the shoes of in Robersonville.

Miss Pearl Robertson and Jasper Everett, of Robersonville, spent Sunday afternoon in Parmele.

REPENTS SWAPPING HER HUSBAND

DECLARING her "life of sin" is behind her, Mrs. Lynn Moore (second from right) repents publicly at a tent revival meeting in Norwalk, Calif. She told the congregation of 200 how she swapped husbands with her next-door neighbor, Mrs. Frances Hardy. The two men secured their divorces together in Las Vegas, Nev., then married each other's mates. Mrs. Moore realized her mistake soon after making the shift. (International)

Interesting Bits Of Business in U. S.

Fighting in the Far East may doom any tax cut at this session of Congress. It all depends, says Senate Majority Leader Lucas of Illinois, "on developments." Employment rose to the second highest point in history last month: 61,482,000. The jobless total climbed too, however, from 10,000,000 to 10,500,000. People may carry the virus from infected to clean premises, but it is often difficult if not impossible to prove that any one of these was the cause of a given outbreak.

Commenting on the future of hog cholera control, Dr. Quin pointed to the unskilled use of the serum-and-virus method of immunizing swine against this disease. The virus that goes into the product is a living organism that can actually spread the disease when carelessly handled. In spite of this danger, 33 barrels of it, amounting to millions of doses, are sold to untrained laymen every year, he said.

"I cannot envisage where such unrestricted sale of fully virulent virus can possibly fit into a sensible long range plan of control and eradication," he declared.

3,057,000 to 3,384,000, when job-hunting high school and college grads swelled unemployment lists. The farm market will account for $4,000,000,000 in electrical sales within the next five years, according to "Rural Marketing." A recent survey of 1,850 metropolitan New York television set owners showed that 90.5 percent of them had the sets turned on for an average of 3.6 hours a day. The heat of strong summer sun may set and darken such stains as those from cherries, peaches, pears, plums, soft drinks or mustard.
