company has experienced several unusually severe storms and the new equipment has assisted greatly in reducing customer outage time. The Albemarle district is the first in the Company's system to install two-way radio communication.

"Recent improvements to plant equipment" according to Mr. Woolford, "include the installation of two 33,000 volt oil circuit breakers at Tarboro, a 33,000 volt oil circuit breaker at Williamston and 33,000 volt regulator at Williamston to improve service in the area. Other improvements include substation and distribution system changes at Creswell and Tarboro.

"In that part of the district north of the Albemarle Sound recent major improvements include the extension of the 110,000 volt line to, and the construction of a major substation at Elizabeth City. A 33,000 volt line to Barco, N. C., the installation of a new substation at Barco and a second 600 KW diesel generator at the Kitty Hawk generating station has recently been completed.

"Veeco employees of the Albemarle district are continually planning for future changes, improvements and additions, to our facilities," said Mr. Woolford, "all of which will result in increased capacity and in better service for our rapidly growing number of electric service customers in Northeastern North Carolina. Many improvements other than a few mentioned above are already so far advanced that their installation during the year is assured."

Guaranty Takes Over at Aurora

Maple T. Harl, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, today announced that all deposits of the Bank of Aurora are being taken over by the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company, Greenville, North Carolina. FDIC will advance about $1,500,000 in cash to make the transfer possible.

Until the transaction is completed, depositors of the Bank of Aurora may continue to do business as usual at the bank's Aurora office and at its Bayboro branch. Chairman Harl assured depositors of the bank that no depositor will suffer a penny's loss and that there will be no interruption to their banking services.

The Bank of Aurora had become overextended, the FDIC Chairman declared, and its liquidity was impaired. In cooperation with Gurney P. Hood, Commissioner of Banks for the State of North Carolina, and after consultation with W. H. Woolard, president of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Greenville, the following plan was worked out:

1. The Guaranty Bank and Trust Company will assume all deposit liabilities of the Bank of Aurora;
2. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will advance cash in an amount sufficient to cover all deposits of the Bank of Aurora taken over by the Greenville institution and, as security for its advance, will take over all assets of the Bank of Aurora for orderly liquidation;
3. The Guaranty Bank and Trust Company will establish branch offices in the present home office and Bayboro quarters of the Bank of Aurora.

The plan has the full approval of Mr. Hood and the North Carolina Banking Board. A resolution agreeing to the sale has been passed by the board of directors of the Bank of Aurora. Mr. Woolard and his executive committee have approved the purchase and the establishment of branches of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Greenville in Aurora and Bayboro.

Mechanical details of the transfer may take a few days, Mr. Harl said, but business meanwhile will continue as usual at the Bank of Aurora.

"This is the seventh instance in which Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has been called upon in North Carolina to aid an insured bank that encountered difficulties," Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is constantly alert to protect depositors in insured banks from any loss of their funds, and will continue to contribute to stability of the banking system to the best of its ability.

"The Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Greenville is one of the oldest and most stable banks in North Carolina. It has a history of continuous operation since 1901; it is well managed; it will provide excellent service to the depositors whose accounts it is taking over; and it will continue to provide the benefits of Federal deposit insurance to those depositors," Mr. Harl concluded.

ALMOST GONE
(Walt Hargett, Asheboro Courier-Tribune)

Some of Randolph county's landmarks that are vanishing are the old covered bridges. Once there were dozens of them throughout the county, but now they are hard to find. I have found five, with directions from Red Hughes at the highway office—one over Richland Creek south of highway 902, one over Brush Creek east of Coleridge, one over Mill Creek at Beane's Mill (now Cox's Mill), one over the west branch of Little River beyond Pisgah and one over Uwharrie River North of highway 64. As road improvements continue, the covered bridges will be replaced, and I would like to hear of any others still remaining in the county.

JUST TOLERABLE

(Sanford Herald)

When in the spring he asked a tobacco farmer how his plant bed was progressing he said, "Just tolerable."

Later when the plants had been set in the field the newcomer questioned the farmer as to how the crop was getting was getting along to receive the answer, "Just tolerable."

When the crop was in the process of being cured the man from up north asked the farmer how it looked. "Just tolerable," was the reply.

When the leaf was graded and placed on auction the northerner happened to be on sale and spying the farmer walked up to him and asked, "Well how did it sell?" "Just tolerable," was the answer.

"Now I know what you southerners mean when you say 'just tolerable,'" he told the farmer,

The man hired was a retired Methodist preacher, and the poor soul trudged from pillar to post and he could find 2,998, and some folks claimed that he counted several as yet unborn.

A HORRIBLE WORLD

(Laurinburg Exchange)

We are living in a horrible world, says a woman writer, when the young have to be taught to avoid and distrust all strangers. "Yet we know many may be saved if they can be trained to resist the lure of an auto ride, a piece of candy or the promise of an ice cream soda."

The observation is pertinent and to the point. But it is a bad world when children must be warned against the stranger and the wolves in human form who prey upon the innocent and the helpless.

Mr. Woolard and his executive committee have approved the purchase and the establishment of branches of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Greenville in Aurora and Bayboro.

Mechanical details of the transfer may take a few days, Mr. Harl said, but business meanwhile will continue as usual at the Bank of Aurora.

"This is the seventh instance in which Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has been called upon in North Carolina to aid an insured bank that encountered difficulties," Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is constantly alert to protect depositors in insured banks from any loss of their funds, and will continue to contribute to stability of the banking system to the best of its ability.

"The Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Greenville is one of the oldest and most stable banks in North Carolina. It has a history of continuous operation since 1901; it is well managed; it will provide excellent service to the depositors whose accounts it is taking over; and it will continue to provide the benefits of Federal deposit insurance to those depositors," Mr. Harl concluded.

when he had looked over the checks. "You mean 'pretty damn sorry'."

POLITICS

(Monroe Journal)

Politics only give a wider opportunity for men to slide down the plank of honesty into the slough of mud. I am inclined to think that if there were a general election of candidates for the Kingdom of Heaven the campaign would be about the same as the ordinary one.

John Wesley Clay, Winston-Salem Journal)

Speaking of the census, I used to live in Hickory, N. C. I knew every living soul in the town, even to their cats and dogs.

Grover Cleveland was then President, and he sent enumerators down to take a census of the town. They counted heads and
