hospital has had in this community in past years. "We are here today to show our gratitude and friendship to Dr. Brown and his nurses who have served the people of this area through the facilities of the institution," the mayor said.

Rev. E. R. Shuller, Methodist minister, offered a special prayer, and Rev. Stewart B. Simms, pastor of the Baptist church, was called upon by Mr. Daniel for a few remarks. "It is a privilege to be here on such an occasion," the minister said, adding that he was indeed grateful for what the hospital means in alleviating suffering. "The group gathered here attests the high esteem in which the hospital and its staff are held in the community," Mr. Simms added.

Rev. N. J. Ward, pastor of the Pentecostal Holiness Church, expressed his appreciation for the program committee's invitation to attend the fellowship of those in attendance upon the event. "Although neighborly get-togethers are disappearing, there is something about them that renews friendship," the minister said. He expressed his appreciation for the good work the hospital and its staff have done and are doing, and pointed out that Christ, in his

Called on by the toastmaster for a few words, Dr. V. E. Brown extended his thanks to the people, declaring they had been mighty good to him, and in return he pledged his best efforts in continuing to serve the community and its people.

After announcing that a similar observance would be planned for the 12th anniversary on the last Wednesday in July, 1951, Toastmaster Daniel asked Rev. Thomas L. Hastings, rector of the Episcopal church, to return thanks.

A long table, prepared on the side lawn, was laden with the most delicious foods, including good old country ham from the tables of Mrs. Bertie Daniel and that jovial old gentleman, Mr.

Then, when the time is right the band of Soviet-dominated nations can be withdrawn into a practically self-sufficient shell, shunning economic contact with the rest of the world. A lot of reorientation of Western trade will be necessary if that happens. Though a limping 40 percent under prewar, the value of East-West trade is still very considerable.

Work Progressing On New Terminal For Oil Company

It is not known how many workers will be employed once the terminal is completed, but it is understood that the plant will serve the territory within a radius of sixty miles. It is quite likely that the company plans to operate a fairly large fleet of trucks, employing possibly ten or twelve drivers, a plant manager and secretarial assistants.

Maria Montez Star In Arabian Nights

A fabulous new example of wizardry will be shown Sunday and Monday when Reallart's "Arabian Nights" opens at the Marco Theatre. The long anticipated Walter Wanger production must be regarded as more than a work of movie art. For sheer beauty, exotic splendor and torrid, action-filled drama, here is a screen triumph of the first magnitude. And it is embellished by glorious Technicolor.

Unforgettable are the characterizations of its three stars, Jor Hall, Maria Montez and Sabu. Maria appears as Sherazade, the Baghdad dancing girl, who wants to marry a Caliph. She does and that is the story of "Arabian Nights," and Jon Hall portrays Haroun-al-Raschid, the Caliph. Sherazade's adventures before she marries Haroun, however, are best told on the screen itself, for this is adult entertainment adhering closely to the original fascination of the classic tale.

Among the picture's numerous highlights, audiences will remember the splendid performances of Leif Erikson, Billy Gilbert, Edgar Barrier and Shemp Howard. There is a circus sequence which stands out vividly and magnificently desert vistas across which the slave caravans travel. There are scenes of the slave markets and luxurious harems, where feminine beauty is emphasized in profigate profusion. The spectacular Oriental dance presented by Miss Montez is a memorable screen event, as is the furious battle between Hall and Erikson. The fight, staged against a moving panorama of countless desert warriors, is probably the film's most exciting innovation.

Other players deserving special praise include Thomas Gomez and Turhan Bey. Outstanding in the picture's feminine group are Elyse Knox, Acquattina and Carmen D'Antonio.
