

Pie-Throwing In Romantic Comedy

Warner Bros. borrowed an hilarious bit from the old Mack Sennett pie-throwing days, dressed it in modern clothes and filmed it for a sequence in the gay romantic comedy, "Pretty Baby," due at the Viccar Theatre on Sunday.

Director Bretaigne Windust supervised Dennis Morgan, Zachary Scott and a waiter all down on the floor of a night club, spattered from head to foot with whipped cream. Obviously they'd just had a collision and although it seemed to have turned out with satisfying results, Director Windust asked for a repeat.

All three had to change clothes, of course, and in his dressing room Zachary expounded on the value of slapstick in even the most sophisticated comedies.

"This is the kind of scene that gives the audience a beefy laugh," he declared. "They'll remember it long after they've forgotten some sophisticated byplay that depends on a smart nuance."

"Pretty Baby" is a comedy on the advertising business and in this particular night club scene Dennis Morgan and Zachary Scott, who are partners in an advertising agency, are taking Betsy Drake their secretary, who holds the key to the agency's principal account to dinner.

In the night club scene, the three have some misunderstanding, and Betsy bids them a curt farewell, turns and leaves. It is then that Dennis and Zach, in their eagerness to overtake her, collide with the waiter, who's carrying a trayful of gooey French pastries.

The collision was very realistic. Chocolate eclairs and other cream delicacies flew through the air as the three hit the floor. One cream puff actually landed on Dennis' head, but Director Windust didn't include that footage as it wasn't "believable enough in real life," he said.

DENNIS MORGAN dances with Betsy Drake, his "Pretty Baby," in a scene from the Warner Bros. comedy-romance which opens at the Viccar Theatre on Sunday. Edmund Gwenn and Zachary Scott round out the stellar cast.

The baking contest, sponsored by the Boosters in connection with the harvest festival here, attracted a large number of exhibitors and more than two hundred single entries, including some mighty good-looking cakes and pies of declared delicacy.

The display, arranged in the Planters Warehouse, was held intact only a short time, but it was viewed by right many.

Vegetables: Mrs. W. T. Gurkin, lamp; Mrs. Alton Keel, cake box; Miss Janie Rogerson, pyrex ware.

Fruits: Mrs. Offie Wynne, case of freezer jars; Miss Katherine Rogerson, mixing bowls; Mrs. N. R. Rogerson, pyrex ware.

Pickles: Elmo Mims, large vase; Mrs. W. S. Gurganus, pyrex ware; Mrs. N. R. Rogerson, cake box.

Tiny Wanda Hendrix, who blushing admits she gets seasick, airsick and carsick when she travels, added a new mobile malady during the filming of the Technicolor "Saddle Tramp," when she became wagon sick.

As Joel McCrea's co-star in the new Universal-International action-film, showing at the Watts Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Wanda had to handle the reins on a pair of horses drawing a wagon.
