

Film Pastor Ties Knot In Comedy

Spring Byington and Edmund Gwenn culminated a rollicking movie romance with a wedding performed by Rev. Neil Dodd, Hollywood's only acting parson, for an important sequence in Universal-International's new comedy, "Louisa," opening Sunday at the Vicar Theatre. Ronald Reagan, Ruth Hussey and Charles Coburn are also starred in the new release.

While Miss Byington's screen son, Ronald Reagan, her other suitor, played by Charles Coburn; and her daughter-in-law, Ruth Hussey, stood by in a flower-draped garden, Rev. Dodd performed his 300th marriage before a movie camera.

There is always considerable speculation both inside and outside a studio about "that actor they signed for the preacher" when Rev. Neil Dodd is announced for a role in a film. Even some of the seasoned film workers on the set of "Louisa" who had not seen the minister before were puzzled when they saw him walk on the brilliantly lighted set and take his place under the grape arbor for the wedding march.

He looked exactly like a preacher and he talked like one. Everything he did seemed right and not once did Director Alexander Hall have to correct him. This, the doubters were finally told, was because Rev. Dodd was the real thing.

Lancaster, Gwenn In New Comedy

Burt Lancaster, Dorothy McGuire and Edmund Gwenn form the luminous trio of stars to be seen starting Sunday at the Watts Theatre in "Mister 880," Twentieth Century-Fox's poignant comedy based on an article in The New Yorker.

Mister 880 of the title, played by Gwenn, is a roughish old party named for the number of his case on file with the United States Treasury Department. For in addition to being a lovable old scamp known to his neighborhood friends as "The Skipper," Mister 880 has his rascally side, too. To the T-men, Mister 880 is a counterfeiter they have not been able to catch in ten years of probing. It takes a special government agent, played by Lancaster, and his romantic interest in the lovely Miss McGuire, a neighbor of Gwenn's, to find the trail that leads straight to Mister 880. The ending, it is reported, is not what you would expect.

Though "Mister 880" is designed for both hearty laughs and warm feeling, Twentieth Century-Fox has preserved a documentary air in filming the workings of the Treasury Department authentically. This Secret Service branch of the department is one of the least known to moviegoers. The studio has also left the facts revealed in the case of "Mister 880," as published in The New Yorker Magazine, unaltered. It was the unusual, human aspect of the story of an amiable, elderly counterfeiter who never made more than the few dollars he needed to barely exist on which first appealed to the film company.
