ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hardison of Williamston announce the engagement of their daughter, Sally Elizabeth, to Mr. Sherman Edgar Long, son of Mrs. D. R. Fields of Durham and Mr. Sherman E. Long, Sr. of Turle Mills. The wedding will take place December 22.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Carrow of Williamston announce the engagement of their daughter, Thelma to Mr. Cecil R. Batts, Jr. of Robersonville, in action against the Philadelphia Eagles. In addition to the special train, hundreds went by chartered buses, private cars and a Robersonville party consisting of six persons or more chartered a special railroad pullman which traveled to the national capitol via the West Coast Limited.

Although the Red Skins suffered a decisive defeat the admirers of Justice were compensated, to some extent, for the long trip and the bitter cold, by his sixty-yard return of a kickoff in the third quarter.

Many in the train party enjoyed the train ride as much as they did the football game. It was the first experience for a hundred or more in the party while dozens in their dotage fondly remembered the time when one was compelled to retire to the toilet or smoking room to puff a cigarette.

It is rare, when several hundred persons get together, for so long a time, that something isn't done or said that is detrimental to the enjoyment of the majority. Harmony reigned throughout the trip and even the personnel of the Coast Line were amazed at the conduct of the entire passenger group.

Mr. J. E. McDonald, District Passenger Agent for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and his assistant Tommy Owens, a former employee of the Western Union and located in Williamston for several years, accompanied the special train. From the engineer to the flagman every employee of the Coast Line did everything humanly possible to see that every guest received every courtesy and accommodation that could be given.

Those attending from Williamston were: Pete Hall, James Herbert Ward and son Herbert, Jr., Harold Everett and son, Harold, Jr., Herbert Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. "Chief" Mangum, Garland Woolard and son Johnny, J. C. White, Buck Barnhill, "Tootsie" Roberson, Clyde Griffin, Fletcher Thomas, Hoke Roberson, William Manning, Maurice Stalls, Frank Weston, Marvin Baker, Milton James, George Harris and son George, Jr., Gaylord Harrison, Sam Williford and Bill Decator.

Those from Hamilton accompanying the Robersonville delegation were Frank Haislip, Hilton Everett, C. B. Roebuck, Clayton House and Whit Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Harrington are moving into their new home on Lee Street today.

Rev. W. B. Harrington continues in Brown's Hospital, late reports stating he is much improved.

Attended Football Game
Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Froneberger and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Harrington attended the football game in Chapel Hill Saturday.

Martin Countians Go To Washington

Traveling in a ten-car special train, football fans of Eastern Carolina converged on Washington City Sunday for the specific purpose of, again seeing their football idol, Charlie Justice, in action against the Philadelphia Eagles. State College Tips To the Housewife

Minimum water and cooking time are advised for maximum returns in nutritive value of cooked vegetables by nutrition scientists.

The quantity of water in which vegetables cook is generally of first importance in the vitamins and minerals they have to offer at the family meal table. Many nutrients are soluble in water, especially vitamin C (ascorbic acid), all B-vitamins, and some of the minerals. If much water is used, more nutrients leach out. For example, cabbage—one of this fall's most plentiful vegetables and an important source of vitamin C—may lose 60 per cent of this vitamin if cooked in four times its volume of water, as is often done. But when only a third as much water as cabbage is used, the loss may be only 10 per cent.

Use just enough water to prevent scorching. A tight-fitting cover on the kettle helps prevent its boiling dry when the cook is not watching. Cook vegetables until tender—no longer. Overcooking can cause much nutritive loss.

Have a small amount of water boiling and the pan thoroughly hot when the vegetable goes in, cover promptly to save heat and shorten the cooking. (Users of pressure saucepans especially should note this rule.) Do not put vegetables in cold water in a cold pan. During the heating-up period, much vitamin C is lost.

Careful timing is very important in pressure cooking. A few minutes' overcooking under pressure causes more loss than at boiling temperature. Pressure cooking saves time with root vegetables or beans.

Prompt serving after cooking counts in saving nutrients. Cooked vegetables lose nutritive value and often appetite appeal if they wait on stove or meal table. Cooking pans attractive enough to serve at the table can help shorten the time between cooking and eating. Cooking enough vegetables to re-heat for another day saves time but wastes vitamins. As much as half the vitamin C in boiled peeled potatoes may be lost by a day's wait—even in the refrigerator.

A new non-stir method of laundering wool blankets in automatic washers proved the solution to the shrinkage problem in tests by Experiment Station home economists. The idea is that of removing soil by soaking rather than agitation after 500 laundering tests of new and used wool blankets in different washers.

Blankets were measured for shrinkage after five washings. Those given four-minute washings shrank twice as much as those in the washer only two minutes. Both were given two deep rinses of one minute each. Agitation of the wool caused most of the shrinkage, matting, and loss of fluffiness. Gentle handling of wet

Honeybees Play Vital Farm Role

More than 80 per cent of the entire insect pollination service required for farm crops is provided by honeybees.

This fact is pointed out by W. A. Stephen, beekeeping specialist for the State College Extension Service, who says that no matter what you eat, what you wear, or where you live, honeybees play an important part in your life.

Stephen asserts that there are blanket once as second rinse comes in.

4. After extracting second rinse water, the blanket is stretched to original size and shape, by two people pulling from opposite ends.

5. Let blanket dry until just slightly damp, then stretch again, and dry.

6. Brush blanket on both sides with a stiff nylon brush or a "pet brush" to lift nap to original softness.

7. Press bindings of blanket. Wool has long been advised in laundering not only blankets but other wool fabric.

The non-stir or soak-cleaning was tried out successfully on 40 new and used wool blankets. New blankets laundered this way shrink only a trifle or not at all. Used blankets, badly shrunken in previous laundering, were reconditioned and came out four to six inches longer when finished by stretching and brushing.

Here's the method in seven steps:

1. Fill washer with lukewarm or hotter water, add a low-subsiding detergent, and dissolve by running the machine a few seconds.

2. Submerge the blanket, let soak 15 to 20 minutes, turning over once or twice by hand.

3. Spin off wash water, run in rinse water of same temperature, submerge blanket, soak five minutes, remove water, add fresh water for another rinse, turing many specific examples of how honeybees have increased the production of the seed necessary for plants used in soil conservation and the growing of forage, fiber and food crops.

"With more intensive farming being practiced," he says, "there is less opportunity for other pollinating insects to survive and the need for honeybees becomes greater. This work of pollination is the real product of the bee's labors. Honey is only a by-product."

The beekeeping specialist points out that a little more than three acres of land are needed today to produce the food and fiber used by one human being. The proper use of this land will increase its productivity and result in more and better things to eat and wear.

"The richest land in the world," Stephen says, "was the land flowing with milk and honey. Bees were essential in this land and they are becoming even more important as our population increases."
