A Salute for the Team

Coach Maynard and his boys are to be congratulated for their enviable record attained in football this season...

The young men, for the most part, have impressed others with their good sportsmanship and recognition of the rules of the game.

Here's to more victories and championships, but let them continue to be with honor and real purpose.

East Meets West

Traveling with their football team, quit a few easterners met westerners in Gaston County last week-end and our people were favorably impressed.

"We would prefer to gain and hold our friendship than win," more than one Bessemer City fan was quoted as saying.

Hardly knowing what to expect when they left for the west, members of Williamston's team learned in due time they were against a formidable opponent...

While local fans were pleased with the score, the friendly reception accorded them by Bessemer City will long be remembered after the field victory is forgotten.

No Objection

"Loan to Argentina geared to bail out U. S. traders," reads a headline.

The loan in question runs well in excess of one hundred million dollars, and has the strong backing of United States business interests in Argentina and in Argentina trade.

In other words, it is all right for the government to risk its dollars in the name of business men, but it is socialistic for the government to risk its dollars in the name of the tillers of the soil and the workingmen.

Nothing To Brag About

Russia, if war comes, will be at a disadvantage because of its low educational standards, a commentator explains.

If the examinations at Army receiving stations in this country are on the level, we haven't too much to brag about.

It would seem, judging from the trend of events, that somebody hasn't enough education to keep the peace, and now we are told that somebody has enough education to fight a war.

We'll trade war education for peace education any time.

Hard To Follow

General Douglas MacArthur may be everything his worshippers claim him to be, but the warrior is a bit hard to follow in far-away Korea.

In mid-October our forces were literally trapped. Possibly he is not to be held accountable, but a second and far more dangerous trap was sprung in November...

Religion And Our Laws

The question is: To what extent do our everyday laws stem from religion?

Perhaps our current philosophy of life would be more clear and would provide a better direction for our material objectives if we remind ourselves of some governmental antecedents.

Our predecessors were not only willing to recognize and do obeisance to a Power higher than themselves but they expressly so stated in permanent form. The first formal act of our nation was its Declaration of Independence in 1776 wherein the Creator was specifically named as the source of the equality of man and his right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Before the adoption of our federal constitution states that the people are "grateful to Almighty God for the blessings of liberty."

It has been well said that the American Revolution was "a revolution of believers," and George Washington declared that "religion and morality are indispensable supports to government."

No profound study is required to establish that many of the most important of our mundane enactments are but human attempts to carry out the fundamental teachings of religion.

The Ten Commandments are not so designated in our secular law books nor is Moses there mentioned. Nevertheless, his moral code, if we may use that term, is reflected in the present laws of every civilized nation.

Notwithstanding the eminence of Christ's teachings at numerous places under varying circumstances, many Biblical scholars held that he rose to the zenith of His power in the Sermon on the Mount and some contend that He had nothing else, the occasion alone would have marked Him as one of the most influential teachers of all time.

The late John M. Zane, one of the leading practicing lawyers of recent years, wrote, "Religion has probably done more than all other influences to mould the human race to a reign of law. Moral law stands behind and upholds the legal system."

The nation's corporations this year are reaping a $37-billion profit—an all-time high. Taxes will cut that figure to $22 billion. That's a fairly sizable amount, and it is reasoned that a four billion-dollar excess profits tax will not place the crops on charity, that they will have something left.

Individual income taxes and the bare necessities of life leave the individual without no such comparative amount.

Clean Out The Surplus

Yugoslavia is facing starvation, and to hold the friendship of Tito, the United States is willing to accept Spain's Franco, guts, feathers and all. Millions for relief are considered.

Now, we have been reminded of the vast surplus of foods, dehydrated and stored in caves in this country. Why not clean out the surplus, relieve the condition the critics have yelled so long and loud about, and at the same time, feed the hungry?

"711 Ocean Drive" Gamble

A motion picture under an all-time... Thursday with Edna Dru. From a film of filming, stage, violence, both the personae lumbia to be so $8,000,000 and its counting for the need for protection.

Kidnap insurance was taken out in behalf of the stars and director Joseph H. Newman, and Los Angeles police assigned a number of its top-flight Gangster Squad officers to the production. In Los Angeles, in Boulder Dam and in other communities here the picture was filmed, in order to tell the story where it happened the way it happened, city, county and state police cooperated fully.

Edmond O'Brien is seen in "711 Ocean Drive" as an electronics expert who turns his knowledge to helping a bookie outfit, and grows with it until he has control of the California set-up. Miss Dru is costarred in the film as the cultured wife of a rival "Syndicate" partner, who tries to take over O'Brien's outfit, and almost succeeds.
