The citizens of Jamesville think it is a shame that they have to pay a street tax to keep up the streets and yet Elm Street, being the principal street is almost impassable. It is strange that there has been no town election for a number of years.

Miss Nevel Allen, of Jamesville, entertained a small crowd last Friday evening. The principal amusement was a contest to see could bite the swinging apple. Miss Lizzie being the successful one won the prize.

Joe Henry Tweedy and Charles Roberson met in combat in Jamesville last Saturday night, Roberson being knocked out in the second round.

Judge Declares No Mercy Awaits SEC Law Violators

Raleigh, Dec.—Judge H. Hoyle Sink, of the Superior Court of North Carolina, stated in open court that any person convicted in his court for violation of the Employment Security Law "can expect no mercy from me or from the Court," while presiding over the November term of the Stanly County Superior Court in Albemarle.

The case was the charge that Sidney J. Ritchie had filed claims for benefits and had drawn $120 in overpayments, as a result of having been employed while drawing the benefits. He was found guilty and the judgment was that he serve 60 days on the Cramped for space in their old quarters on Washington Street, the owners purchased right at one acre of land for their new building. Now, with their spacious building, the owners have ample room for a used car lot, storage and parking. Work is progressing on the landscaping, but already the property offers an attractive and convenient setting.

Constructed in accordance with modern specifications, the building is arranged for convenience and the best possible use. To the back of the showroom are the offices, rest rooms and parts supply, connecting with the main service department. The showroom is unusually large and while it is next to impossible to keep many models on hand in the face of demand, the company plans to display several there Saturday and next week.

roads and pay a fine of $200 and the costs. No provision was made requiring the refund of the $120 overdrawn, as is done in most such cases.

The case brought into court by James C. Bradham, ESC claims deputy, stationed in Concord and operating in that area. Judge Sink, stating that he was not too familiar with the Employment Security Law, kept Mr. Bradham on the witness stand for half an hour or longer, questioning him and getting explanations as to conditions for eligibility in drawing unemployment compensation and other details of the operation of the program.

Judge Sink then gave a lecture to court officials and attendants, explaining the advantages of the plan to those who become unemployed and are eligible for benefits. He stated that he assumed violations of this kind were being committed over the State and commended the field force of the ESC for their activity in trying to curb it.

Judge Sink gave assurance that fraud in securing benefits would people convicted in his court be dealt with severely.

"Let's Dance" At Hamilton Sunday

Boasting the exciting talents of Betty Hutton and Fred Astaire, Paramount's tuneful romantic comedy "Let's Dance" arrives Sunday at the Hamilton Theatre. Hailed as the year's top musical, with a hit-packed score by Frank Loesser, the picture is in color by Technicolor and features Roland Young, Ruth Warrick, Lucile Watson and six-year-old Gregory Moffett in his screen debut.

Set against a colorful show business background, "Let's Dance" is the sprightly-paced story of an irrepressible hooper, played by Astaire, whose ambition is to put away his dancing shoes and become a successful business man. This leads to a split with his bombastic partner, Betty Hutton, and a full cycle of laughs, tears, tunes and terpsichory before the two are reunited.

It's difficult to imagine anyone outdoing perfection, but according to advance reports Fred Astaire surpasses even his greatest performances with seven spectacular dance routines.

Betty Hutton shares the spotlight with him, and for the first time on the screen demonstrates her hitherto unsuspected ability as a top-flight dancer.

In composing the entire musical score for "Let's Dance," Frank Loesser wrote six new songs including the already popular "Why Fight the Feeling," "Oh Them Dudes," "Can't Stop Talking," "Tunnel of Love," "The Hyacinth" and "Jack and the Beanstalk."
