State College Tips To the Housewife

Carrots For Health
That carrots are good for carotene, a substance the body converts into vitamin A, is well known. Studies show that carotene increases as carrots mature. Thus mature carrots are the buy for those who want full value in vitamin A.

As long as carrots remain edible, there is no loss of carotene in storage, food specialists report from scientific research. In fact, agriculture studies some years ago showed that carotene actually can increase in carrots during storage. Carrots also offer some Vitamin C. Young carrots contain more of this vitamin than mature carrots but the amount changes from day to day. Immediately after carrots are harvested, they lose some C. After that, the loss is gradual during storage. Carrots stored without tops keep in good eating condition longer than those stored with tops.

Celery Thrift
Thriftier use of celery is urged by nutritionists, who point out that vitamin A found in the outside leaves of celery proved much richer than stalks or the inner "heart." The outside stalks rated higher than inside stalks. Celery contributes more if the whole bunch, leaves included, is used. Eating it raw is of special advantage. To get the most for the money spent on celery, both in flavor and nutritive value, home makers should make full use of the leaves. The tender inner leaves should be eaten along with the stalk or cut up in salad. Outer less tender leaves and stalks may be cooked in a small amount of water until just tender, then served in white sauce containing a little cheese. Or they may be used to good advantage in stuffing for the poultry that is plentiful this month, or in soup or other cooked dishes. We recommend this dish to you.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of my Dad, Noah A. Beppard, who departed from us February 25, 1950.
Although you are not with us, My dear Dad, and with tears, we look at your chair, And think of the joy we had together, and of the time when you were here.
Your dear face we miss, oh, so sadly. Memories so lovely we share.
But we know you are happier up there, than you ever could be down here.

Bing Sings And Dances In Film

The nation's number one entertainer, Bing Crosby, heads the sparkling cast of Paramount's song-filled romantic comedy, "Riding High," which opens next Sunday at the Marco Theatre. Produced and directed by the famed Frank Capra, the happy-go-lucky hit also stars Coleen Gray, Frances Gifford and Charles Bickford.

An ear-pleasing, eye-beguiling, mirth-provoking musical drama, according to advance reports, based on a heart-warming story by the late Mark Hellinger, "Riding High" is said to be Crosby's greatest picture. That's high praise, indeed, when one considers that Der Bingle has had a hand in such spectacular successes as "Blue Skies," "Road to Rio" and "Going My Way."

Joining with him in the fun and excitement is lovely Coleen Gray, one of the most refreshing young actresses to hit the screen in a long time. Preview audiences agree that she, Miss Gifford and Charles Bickford give superlative portrayals.

State Dept. Official Advises Producer

John Puerifoy, Assistant Secretary of State, was an interested visitor on the set of Film Classics' Cinecolor production, State Department—File 649, which comes to the Marco Theatre on Saturday. Puerifoy conferred with Joseph Bynard, president of Film Classics, and producer Sigmund Neufeld on technical aspects of the production, which stars Virginia Bruce and William Lundigan.

State Department—File 649, was filmed with complete cooperation of the U. S. State Department. It is the tensely dramatic story of a member of the State Department foreign service, who comes into conflict with a Mongolian warlord on the rampage.

Catalogs Listing Price Increases

Price increases in the many of new spring mail order catalogs were considerable, and many items were marked "sorry, not available." Automobile tires were up 25 to 35 percent over last year, blankets 20 to 25 percent, and men's shoes increased 8 to 16 percent. One catalog showed an advance in the price of Rub - a - dub - tub. Bend - stoop - and - wring. Slesh - drip - and - mop. Suds up to your elbows. Steam in your face. Messy, crick-in-the-back hard work.

And when you've finished with a tubful of clothes, you've earned about half a cent. How come? Why that's about the cost of the current used by an electric washer to do the same job in a fraction of the time, without any effort on your part.
The same thing is true about almost every household task... cooking, cleaning, dish-washing, sewing... any woman who does any task that electricity can do, is working for a few cents a day!
Electricity is so cheap in Vepcovia that it's extravagant not to use it—in every way you can!
