Roman Catholics and Episcopalians

By Rev. Thomas Hastings

Some people have it in their minds that there is some connection between the Episcopal Church and the Roman Catholic Church. Actually, there is no connection. The following attempts to tell you briefly what the Episcopal Church has to offer you. It is not an attempt to explain why we severed our connections with Rome. This is told elsewhere. We believe the break was necessary.

When it came in the year 1534, the Church of England did no more than to say that from now on the Bishop of Rome (the Pope) was not to be considered as having any authority over the Church of England. The king was made head of the Church but claimed no ecclesiastical power to ordain or control the sacraments. The real religion of the people remained the same with, as the years passed, some important clarifications and truths which the Reformation had brought to light.

The Episcopal Church therefore has kept the great Catholic truths. Some of these are:

(1) The faith as expressed in the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds and the first seven general Church councils, all of which were representative of Latin and Greek Christianity.

(2) The three-fold unbroken orders of ministers (bishops, priests and deacons) who are in the same apostolic succession as any Roman priest today.

(3) The two great sacraments of the Church—baptism and holy communion, with the Catholic interpretation that they are "outward and visible signs of an inward and spiritual grace." Episcopalians believe in the real presence at holy communion, but in Mrs. Sallie Cherry and daughter have been visiting Mrs. N. T. Perry.

Harry M. Stubbs left Sunday to resume his studies at the University.

Mrs. U. S. Hassell, of Jamesville, spent several days here last week.

Fred M. Shute spent Sunday in Windsor with a party of friends.

W. A. Ellison went to Stokes Tuesday on business.

George Howard Kent is at home after a visit to his father at Newport News.

interpret this spiritually. The other five "commonly called sacraments" we believe were not specifically ordained by Christ.

(4) The Church calendar year which teaches the truths about Christianity through the nine seasons (Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Pre-Lent, Lent, Easter, Ascension, Whitsunday, Trinity). We also observe other important holy and saints' days.

(5) The emphasis on the arts to express through painting, stained glass, music, Church architecture and symbolism the glories of God and the truths of our religion.

(6) The monastic life. Provision is made through various orders of monks and nuns in the Episcopal Church for those who feel called to take vows and join such a community.

In addition to these Catholic truths, the Episcopal Church has emphasized certain fundamentals which we believe Christ meant us as a Church to have, and because the medieval Catholic church had lost these, the Episcopal Church "protested" and reaffirmed them.

(1) All services should be in a language understood by the people. (English to Americans, Italian to Italians, Indian to Indians, etc.) The services are simplified so that people can follow them by using "The Book of Common Prayer."

(2) Salvation is a matter of the gift of God to those who have faith and is not something earned by anyone. Nothing is necessary for salvation except what is found in, or based upon, clear scriptural authority. Therefore we emphasize the study and reading of the Bible and the importance of sermons by priests to explain the Bible through the ministry of the word.

(3) We have communion in both kinds, i. e., bread and wine, for we believe Jesus meant that it should be administered this way. We have denounced the doctrine of transubstantiation as not based on scripture.

(4) We believe in and practice the council method of government for the Church which was how the early Church was governed and is more democratic than Rome. Laymen play a vital and active part in all our Church councils. Laymen have the voice in the calling of a rector to minister to the ordinary parish.

(5) We believe in marriage for our priests if they be so inclined, for the idea of a celibate (unmarried) priesthood is based on a theory of there being a "double standard" in the Christian life, one for clergy, one for laymen, which has no basis in the Bible.

(6) We provide means for dealing with any moral corruption of our clergy through a system of courts which act effectively.

(7) We emphasize the clear light of reason and have done away with superstition, so that we find no place for images and relics in our Church which excite people to superstitious beliefs.

(8) We extoll the worship of Christ high above the veneration of worship of the Virgin Mary, feeling that the living Christ can be spoken to, and can speak to us, today without any intermediary.

We cordially invite you, both Protestants and Roman Catholics, to talk with your nearest Episcopal clergyman about these principles of our Church which we cherish so highly.

U. S. Production Eases Off To A Low Level

Industrial production in the U. S. eased off in July to the lowest level in nearly a year. The Federal Reserve Board's index fell from 222 in June to 213 in July, the lowest since last September.

Even with federal restrictions on credit, it still is much easier to get into debt than out of it.

Drying Units Aid Harvesting of Hay

Some 75 or more artificial hay drying units have been bought and put into use by North Carolina farmers during the past year, according to Edwin S. Coates, extension agricultural engineering specialist at State College.

Use of this new equipment plus a favorable harvesting season are enabling farmers to harvest their 1951 hay crop with a considerably smaller loss than they experienced in 1950, says Coates.

Practically all of the new owners, according to the specialist, are well pleased with their new equipment and say it has resulted in considerable improvement in hay quality.

Farmers in the State lost an estimated 30 percent of their hay crop last year, largely because of unfavorable weather. This year, says Coates, the loss probably will be about 20 percent.

The State College specialist points out that rapid increases in North Carolina's livestock numbers make forage crops of greater importance. He says farmers in 90 percent of the State's counties have need for some type of crop-drying system.
