Holier Than Thou Attitude

Republicans, entering into the 1952 election with a holier-than-thou attitude, surely have short memories. It remains to be seen if the people will remember some of the unsavory deals "pulled" back in the days of the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

There's the old Teapot Dome scandal, a manipulation in which the big boys hoped to steal and carry away vital oil.

Back in the 1920's, the big boys in the Republican party did not mess around with little old mink coats and deep freezers. Secretary of the Treasurer Andrew Mellon, operating under three Republican Presidents, dished out tax monies to his pals to the tune of millions of dollars. The late Senator James Cozzen in 1924 smelled a rat in the Internal Revenue Department, and he learned that tax rebates were made secretly to the tune of millions of dollars.

The reports showed that $15 million went to Mellon's own company; U. S. Steel got more than $65 million; Bethlehem was favored to the tune of more than $22 million; Federal Shipbuilding came in for nearly $20 million, and Gulf Oil, another of Mellon's companies, shared $3 million of the secret hand-out. Then to climax it all, Mr. Mellon handed himself a $400,000 rebate, second to a $457,000 handout to John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

During the Harding administration, Mrs. Alice Longworth, a leader in Washington's High Republican society, is quoted as saying following a visit to the White House while Mr. Harding and the Republican bigwigs were there:

"No rumor could have exceeded the reality. The study (room) was filled with cronies, Daughterty, Jess Smith, Alex Moore and others, the air heavy with tobacco smoke. Trays with bottles, containing every imaginable brand of whiskey stood about. (Prohibition was then the law of the land, it will be remembered). Cards and poker chips ready at hand, a general atmosphere of waist coats unbuttoned, feet on the desk and the spittoon alongside."

It would seem that the corruption in Washington today, and it is admitted that it stinks to high heaven, is small potatoes compared with the deals pulled back yonder by the now holier-than-thou boys.

And the Republicans have not changed. It seems that a fellow by the name of Gabrielson is under heavy suspicion right now. It has been charged that Senator Styles Bridges, just recently promoted by the Republicans, favored increasing the salary of a government man by the name of Oliphant about the time the Senator was trying to softpedal around a tax problem for a big-time New York gambler.

Hard To Suit

Some of those in Washington who would have others believe they are to be found on the side of all that's right and noble, appear to be hard to suit, and actually balk when some one tries to get good things accomplished.

Our own Senator Clyde R. Hoey is listed as being opposed to the reorganization of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, explaining that the Civil Service should be limited to the local field for its chiefs. It would appear that Mr. Hoey is not yet ready to surrender the political plums, that even though Civil Service is introduced into the high revenue field, the politicians could still deal out patronage.

The Constitution affords no guarantee against graft, but its provisions make possible for the people to do something about it. The President's organization plan for the Bureau of Internal Revenue may not remedy a bad situation, but it is a step in the right direction. Yet, Mr. Hoey and some few others are against it.

Restore Faith

At the beginning of a new year, we can think of no more important thing than a restoration to this state and nation of faith—"despotism may govern without faith, but liberty cannot."

We must have faith, as Sacramentans and as Americans, in the Divine Providence, in our free way of life, in our destiny, in ourselves.

We should return to those traditions which made America great, and be guided by those fundamental principles which have been for our country, through all the years, even when in the wilderness of war and of depression, a pillar of fire by day and a pillar of fire by night.

Let us seek leaders, locally and nationally, in whom we can have faith—leaders with every-day probity and with intellectual integrity, with vision tempered by knowledge and common sense, with burning patriotism that rises above political considerations, with conviction that holds fast to principle yet recognizes the essentiality of the right to disagree in a free society.

Such potential leadership exists, for in this America, this land of ours, the spirit of Washington and of Lincoln persists in the hearts of the people.

Let's dedicate 1952 to cleaning corruption out of government, and restoring to government that faith which is necessary for it to function in the interests of all the people.—Sacramento (Calif.) Union

Well Spent

According to a story released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, the Commodity Credit Corporation has since 1933 through June of last year experienced a deficit of one billion and twenty million dollars in underwriting the nation's farm program.

That's a fairly sizable amount of cash, to be sure. We dare say that that money was well spent, that because of it many billions were added to the economy of this nation, and that without it there could have been a depression, if not something even worse.

Before the reactionaries shout about that billion dollar deficit, they should recognize the lasting values bought with the money. If the government can accomplish as much in the next eighteen years with a billion and twenty million dollars as it did with that amount in the past eighteen years, it should do it by all means.

Childish

The actions of some of the seekers of the Presidency is downright childish and remind one of the two little boys playing marbles. "If you don't let me win, I won't play," one little boy says to the other little boy.

One of the candidates says he'll not enter a primary in this or that state because he doesn't think he has a chance there. If he doesn't have a chance, then it is foolish for him to enter the primary. But it is just as foolish for him to enter a primary where he is certain of victory.

And what's wrong with entering every potential candidate in every primary? To do so would at least bare the wishes of some of the people, rather than leaving it up to the professionals' ~~unwashed~~ hotel room out in Chicago.

Mistakes Can Be Helpful

No day passes but what we can look back and see some act that we would like to recall. Much of life is filled with misgivings and worry over mistakes committed in daily living. No one is immune from them; the weak perish in the struggle, but the strong use them as steps toward a happy tomorrow.

The reward comes when we can make our mistakes aid in building a more happy and purposeful life for the morrow.—The Uplift.

The Stassen Plan

Harold Stassen, self-mentioned candidate for the Presidency, estimates that if 100,000 people sent him $5 each, he could enter the primaries in fourteen states.

If and when Mr. Stassen finds 100,000 people ready and willing to hand over $5 each to him, he can claim a direct right-of-way to the White House.

Favorable Time Element

Those who are sorely troubled because Congress is back in session, blowing hot air all over the country, should cheer up. Along about next June, congressmen can be expected to desert Washington in the interest of their campaigns back home.

Things might look terribly dark, but the time element as it relates to the second session of the 82nd Congress is certainly favorable.

People who glory in parading their virtues would do well to remember that it takes a considerable number to make a parade."

60 SECOND SERMONS By Fred Dodge

TEXT: "Don't make excuses—make good."—Elbert Hubbard

A mid-westerner was sitting on the beach watching a fair and very stout bather enjoy herself in the surf. He knew nothing of tides and did not notice that each succeeding wave came a little closer to his feet. At last an extra big wave splashed over his shoe tops.

"Hey, there!" he yelled at the fair, fat bather, "Quit your jumpin' up and down. D'yuh want to drown me?"

How ready we are to blame the other fellow for a short-coming of our own. Without thinking we try to excuse ourselves for the embarrassment we feel by putting the blame on someone else or something else. To make excuses is easy. Almost everyone does it—excepting successful folks. If they make excuses at all, they make excuses for the other fellow, and accept responsibility for error themselves. If we would spring to the defense of others as swiftly as we make excuses for our short-comings, this would be a happy world, indeed.

Interesting Bits Of Business In U. S.

Canada's dollar is worth as much as America's in the money markets for the first time since 1939. Since freed from controls in 1950 the Canadian dollar's value has risen steadily. Main reasons for the rise is probably U. S. demand for Canadian securities and the influx of capital for jittery European investors.

7:30 p. m., Prayer services each Sunday.

The public is cordially invited.

A $500,000 plant for the production of self-lighting cigarettes is planned for the West Coast. Plant expansion in the first quarter is estimated at $26 billion yearly by the Department of Commerce. In 1951 quarter the rate was slightly under $25 billion yearly. Current pace represents a gain of $10 billion since 1949.
