A Turning Point

Religious leaders are attaching much importance to the recent introduction of the Revised Standard Version of the Bible. They have expressed the hope that more people will turn to the Book now that it has readily understood.

It has been rightly asserted that the full acceptance of the Holy Book would do more to relieve tension here at home and throughout the world than all the political elections, past, present and future.

The meaning of the Bible has not been changed in the new translation, and in this day of uncertainty existing on so many fronts, it is fitting for all people to turn to the Bible and search out its truth and meaning, and then apply the meaning to our daily walk through life.

While politicians can shake things up and twist the issues, the Bible holds the only solution to our problems here at home and abroad. And if we are to solve those problems, we must turn to the Book.

The new translation offers a turning point, and the world, if it is to exist in anything like a noble fashion, must recognize that turning point and follow through, holding tight to the principles propounded in

Will It Pass Unnoticed?

Virginians are talking about spending quite a few thousands of dollars on a river dredging project in the Norfolk area. Norfolk taxpayers are to pay more than $100,000 on the project, but Uncle Sam's share of the cost has not been mentioned.

Surely, the project has merits, and that's beside the point. The main issue centers around one fellow by the name of Byrd, the man who has talked much and acted little about economy in government. Will he let the expenditure go by unnoticed? . There has been a great deal of spending in Virginia, and Byrd seldom attacked the cost of such projects. However, similar projects in other areas have been branded as social-

If Mr. Byrd is going to cut down on taxes. let him start slashing projects in his own back yard. There's nothing in the record about his opposition to the spending of nearly half million dollars of the federal taxpayers' money to pump sand up on a resort beach in Virginia. But he has had much to say about the government spending $1 and $2 an acre to keep the top soil from washing away on those lands where food and fiber are produced.

Will That Solve The Problem?

It has been reliably suggested that U. S. Senators' salaries be increased from $12,500 to $24,000 a year. Possibly the hard-working law makers need more money, but will salary increases solve the problem in Washington?

Instead of buying a $41,000 home, Senator Nixon, with his salary doubled, might not consider paying less than $82,000 for a home. The salary increase would add prestige, and the fellows would need more private hand-outs to mail out more greeting

It would be more appropriate for the Washington boys to plead poverty as an excuse for not mailing out greeting cards than it would be to try to explain away by emotional acts the hand-outs from doubtful sources. Then, too, the boys could eliminate a bit of their social life, and devote more time to serving the country and all the people. Also they might get employment in other places while the Congress is not in

Sized Up Long Ago

Richard M. Nixon, the little fellow who is running for the vice presidency as the leading man in a sloppy soap opera, was sized up years ago by James Harvey Robinson (1863-1936) as follows:

"Political campaigns are designedly made nto emotional orgies which endeavor t distract attention from the real issues involved, and they actually paralyze what slight powers of cerebration man can normally muster."

Henry Brooks Asams (1838-1918) also had "poor Richard's" number when he said, "Practical politics consists in ignoring facts."

Nixon, after covering over his own erring ways, is still spreading unfounded rumors and making misleading statements in the current campaign.

A man who'll employ such tacties, regardless of his ability, is not fit to be in the government even as a dog catcher in a twoby-four precinct.

Gone Political

A certain radio commnetator, working on a limited State hook-up and the mouthpiece of a large out-of-state fertilizer manufacturer, has just about stopped plugging for fertilizer, and joined hands with the Republicans. Talking much and always saying little, the commentator, apparently feeling his importance, makes flaws and exploits them to the glory of the Republicans.

It's a free country, to be sure, and the right of that two-by-four buil artist to run ii at the mouth is not denie when the commenator digs up things about the Democrats, he should tell his boss's customers that it was the Republicans who held full power when cotton sold for five cents, tobacco 15 cents and peanuts from three-quarters to one cent a pound. He should remind his farmer customers that the right of the farmer to enjoy a fair return on his investment and labor, even the labor of his little children, was gained over strong Republican opposition.

To hear the all-wise and tremendously inflated guy talk, one wonder's if the Republican party or the Republican fertilizer company is paying his way.

Farmers and others in the agricultural centers of this State will do well to consider the source, and act accordingly.

Fire Prevention

Next week is being observed as fire prevention week. While it is good business to practice fire prevention every week, it is timely that a week be set aside to attend to those little things that when left alone markets totaled 347,700 bales comfor long can start a fire.

tor knows what conditions invite fires, and time should be spent relieving those condi-

Williamston had several costly fires last winter. It is time now to take every possible precaution in holding down the loss to an absolute minimum this coming winter.

Jeckyl Or Hyde

Mr. Clyde Hoey's efforts in behalf of the Democrats in the current Presidential campaign are welcomed. He is doing a splendid job, preaching the Democratic doctrine and opening the doors for the wayward.

It is hard to believe that the Senator would come down here and enter into the campaign with such vim and vigor, and then return to Washington and keep such close company with the Republicans.

This Jeckyl and Hyde business is most confusing, and is even harder to understand after the Senator chose to sit out more than one campaign in the not-too-long ago.

Poor Defense

Willing to do anything to support Richard Nixon in his business of taking handouts from any and all sources, a congressman in an effort to soften the gravity of the practice, says he could name one hundred other congressmen who have received funds from special sources.

It's a poor defense when one justifies his position because 100 other folks did the same thing. It is time that those names be submitted to the people and time for the people to vote the rascals out as well as block Nixon in his nefarious bid for the vice presidency.
