Interesting Bits Of Business In U. S.

Automobile makers got government sanction to step up production the first half of next year, but no pledge of more steel to make cars. . . . The three biggest soap companies have been accused by the government of not competing with one another with sufficient vigor, a complaint which will astonish listeners to daytime radio programs. . . . Paperboards prices on the Eastern seaboard declined in the face of record orders and rising costs.

Dollars In Circulation Hit Record High During Year

The Federal Reserve reports that, whether or not you have your share of the dollars out, there are 30,370,000,000 of them in circulation, more than ever before in the history of the nation. Money in circulation means U. S. currency not held in the banks or the Reserve System, but presumably in the pockets of U. S. citizens.
