$74.70 Per Day

Over the strong protests of those involved, Foreign Operations Administrator Harold Stassen has made public the expenses of Cohn and Schine, Senator McCarthy's investigators whose tour of Europe a few months ago made this country a laughing-stock.

The two clowns drew in foreign funds a total of $2,540, an average of $74.70 per day for each of the two during the 17 days of their trip. This amount, which compares with allowances of from $6 to $12 a day for Stassen's own employees, does not include transportation, the cost of which was borne by the Military Air Transport Service.

Yet the Cohn-Schine trip was officially described as an investigation of "waste and mismanagement" by the United States government.—News and Observer.

Dirty Linen

It is becoming rapidly apparent that the Democrats are not the only ones who have dirty linen.

Race track manipulations have a clear track directly from the high places to the penitentiary. New Jersey is literally bogged down in unsavory reports. And the parties are Republicans.

Now, it should be admitted that there's dirty linen in the closets of both parties. Neither party can do much about dirty linen getting into the closet. But either party or both, when willing, can do something to get the dirty linen out of the closet, apply the fumigants and let the pests know that certain poisoning is to be found in the dark places.

Correct

The Evening World-Herald out in Omaha declares that all the talk by Democrats about Republican "farm policies" is nothing more than pure "windbagery" and that it will be recognized as such by thinking farmers.

The Omaha paper then makes the correct observation: "In actuality there is no such thing as a Republican farm policy."

The paper's statement was supported only a short time later by President Eisenhower when, in so many words, he said he didn't know yet what his farm program is. Well, it appears that his farm program is anything but what he promised last fall.

Looks Bad, Anyway

It now develops that Senator John Brickner of Ohio still receives money from an Ohio law firm representing the Pennsylvania Railroad. The record shows that Senator Brickner has fought the St. Lawrence seaway project.

An investigation of the hook-up has been suggested, but Senator Brickner says an investigation is not necessary, explaining that "everybody knows I'm honest."

The Senator may be honest and as free of stain as the tooth of a hound, but the arrangement looks bad, anyway.

A Bigger Fear

Nothing that has been said about atomic bombs has frightened old-timers one tenth as much as did the prediction in 1910 that Halley's Comet was going to switch its tail and smash the earth to smithereens.—The Bristol (Va.) Herald Courier.

What you save, you leave behind; what you spend, you have for a while; but what you give away in a worthy cause, or what you do to benefit mankind, you take with you, and the latter is what lives after you.—Employer-Employee Digest.

I'm Old-Fashioned

By Ruth Taylor

I have come to the reluctant conclusion that I am out-of-date—definitely old-fashioned. I must be. Or else the modernists have changed the meaning of the words in the dictionary.

For instance — "These are uncertain and perilous times." Too often that sounds to me like a whining alibi for not working and planning ahead, like an excuse for quitting before you start. Now the spell-binding orators back in the early days of the Revolutionary War said just those same words—but those who heard and nodded in agreement, went home when they could and planted their crops for the next season.

"The children of today are unmanageable." Now how in the world can we expect to face whatever Communist is dictator of Russia today, if we let a pint-sized child tell us where to get off? The only unmanageable children are those whose parents won't take the time and the thought and the trouble to manage them!

Then there are the professional do-gooders whose hearts are always bleeding for somebody. Funny, but they always make me think of the Walrus weeping for the poor oysters, and holding his handkerchief to his streaming eyes as a cover to his swallowing more than his share of oysters. And I always seem to hear a cash register clicking in the background.

And the others who won't cast their bread upon the waters unless they are sure it will come back well buttered and with strawberry jam to boot! (Whatever the organization to which you belong, you know just the kind of a person I mean!)

And the people who never pick up the check, who are always called away just at that particular moment. Who sponge on other people and who coast on their work. They are the same ones who do a slipshod job that the conscientious worker has to correct, who take time off for every little thing—and let someone else carry their load. They are the ones who lower wages—and then howl about it as unfair.

But to go back to words. It seems to me that today "privileges" are being spelled "rights." Now I'm all for people wanting better things—the more, the better. But I think there is too much taking things for granted and claiming privileges—which, in my lexicon, means something to be worked for and earned—as a divine right. After all, remember what happened to the man who proclaimed "the divine right of kings?" And last—I can't get used to responsibility always being the job of someone else. When I went to school, I learned that you could delegate authority, but not responsibility. That was something that was yours. You accepted it—and carried it out—or failed.

I must be old-fashioned. I have an idea that if we, each of us, fulfilled his or her personal responsibility, the world as a whole would be a lot better off. What do you think?

Might Rise Up and Haunt Him

In addition to the scheming politicians, President Eisenhower will do well to watch out that his ghost does not rise up and haunt him.

Candidate Eisenhower said many things last fall, among them was a commitment for 10 percent farm parity. More recently the President has been found approving Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson's farm plan of allowing the farmer "to go it alone."

Mr. Benson and Mr. Eisenhower may pull a rabbit out of the hat and handle the problems from now on out, but they should not forget that they are regarded in their own right as far as Irish potato growers and beef raisers are concerned.

A Certainty

And if the money spent for war could be spent to make people prosperous and happy, there would be one enough to eliminate the surplus population.—Buffalo News.

Explained

If, as an optometrist estimates, 72 per cent of the American people are suffering from eyestrain, it probably is due to looking for a place to park.—Macon Telegraph.

About When

A country has about hit bottom when an honest man is the only one who doesn't know how to keep out of jail.—New Haven Register.

Now Thinks

The kind of a fellow who once thought that the world owed him a living now thinks it owes him a ride.—Oregon Motorist.

The nimble lie is like the second-hand upon a clock. We see it fly, while the hour-hand of truth seems to stand still; and yet it moves unseen, and wins at last, for the clock will not strike till it has reached the goal.—Longfellow.
