

Scotland Neck Plays In Williamston Tomorrow Evening At 8

Conference Standing Not Involved In Tilt

Green Wave Will Be Handicapped By Many Injuries

Only One Home Game Left For Current Season As Team Travels Nov. 6

Handicapped by a batch of injuries that has reduced its effectiveness considerably, the Williamston Green Wave football team will take the field here tomorrow evening at 8:00 o'clock against an old foe who no longer is a member of the Albemarle Conference but one the local boys need to turn back to get a fair record for the season. The opponent is the Scotland Neck High

Scotland Neck at Williamston. Snow Hill at Robersonville. So. Edgecombe at Jamesville, 1. Plymouth at Tarboro. Aholmie at Edenton. Columbia at Hertford.

School team which has a reputation for being tough at home but slightly less aggressive away from its supporters.

Scotland Neck is not believed to be quite as strong this year as last when they defeated Williamston 19-6 at Scotland Neck but the Scotties do have a few good boys back in the line although with Haynes and Locke gone they are less powerful in the backfield. Of their record this year not too much is known here. Plymouth defeated them earlier in the season and they recently lost to Littleton. They are planning on going into the Roanoke Chowan conference next season.

Williamston has a number of boys it cannot count on for this game and possibly for the rest of the season. Among these are Bill Lassiter, Bobby Ray Mobley, Bill Glover on the more seriously injured side with others recovering from less serious injuries. Ward

Perry appears certain to do the punting for the Green Wave in the absence of Bobby Mobley although David Davis will continue kicking off and Ralph Parker will try for the extra points. Mobley may get in for a spot play now and then but it was not regarded as too likely although he will be in uniform and serve as co-captain of the team. Dickie Clayton and Foggy Gurkin are moving in to take up the slack in the backfield caused by the injury of Mobley, Lassiter and Glover. Ralph Parker also is likely to see action at fullback where he ran rather well at Plymouth in the late minutes of the game. Quarterbacking Williamston will be Jacob Zemon and James Perry although Perry has a cut on his face from last week. Defensively David Davis at center, Larry Chesson and Ward Perry at guards, and George Harris and Jimmie Carraway at tackles are expected to carry the burden in the line with Gerald Griffin, newly moved to end showing a lot of promise. It is expected that Turner Manning will rejoin John Dunn and Tommy Harris in action at the end spots after being out with a foot injury.

After making none too good a showing against Plymouth last Friday, the boys are hoping to get back into the victory column this week but realize it is not going to be done with a "tag" defense.

Williamston has come so near to scoring so many times and picked up a lot of yards but somehow that little bit of extra "go" has failed them. Not once this year has a Williamston runner gone all the way for a score from any considerable distance. The offense appears, though, to have been ahead of the defense which has permitted runners to score on the Green Wave on long or break-away runs.

There will be just one more home game after this one tomorrow night. Weldon comes here October 13 after the Green Wave makes a trip to Aholmie on November 6 for the final conference game of the season. Last year Williamston won two conference games, Columbia and Plymouth. So far this year it has won one, Columbia, and tied one, Edenton. Edenton is reported to have fallen down considerably since Williamston met them. One report said the Aces had one man who wanted to tackle everybody and the rest did not appear interested in stopping anybody. Virtually all teams, of course, suffer from some of that trouble as players make a half-hearted effort to stop a runner but don't really put in their best. Fans who follow the teams can pick them out as they notice they are almost never in on a tackle or block.

Had Williamston not suffered so many injuries there was an outside chance they could stop Aholmie but now it appears a matter of seeing how low the score can be held unless some of the boys can come up with above par performances.

SUNSHINE SUE

"Sunshine Sue", nationally known figure on the "Old Dominion Barn Dance" program, will headline the entertainment schedule at the Martin County Fair in the Carolina Warehouse here Friday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock and again at 7:30 o'clock in the evening.

So popular has she become in Virginia through her WRVA program, that she was crowned "Queen of the Hillbillies," a title given her by Virginia's former Governor William M. Tucker. Born Mary Arlene Higdon, she was the last of seven children of farm folks in Keosauqua. When she dated John Workman for the first time, she began the life-long use of the singing voice that was to become so famous. The two married right after high-school at a time when the 1930 depression gripped the nation, and when as Sue puts it, "You couldn't buy a job."

The Workmans eventually got an opportunity to sing and play the guitar on a small Iowa station, went on to a larger one. The trail to hillbilly fame led them to Chicago and the "National Barn Dance," and finally, in 1940, to Richmond.

Sue got her name during the early hectic performances. One morning, their announcer, unable to remember the name of their act, crooked his finger at her and said, "Hey, you, you there—Sunshine Sally—that's what I'll call you. Anyone who can look that bright at this time in the morning deserves to be called Sunshine." In 1953, when the Workmans joined the "National Barn Dance" in Chicago, there were three Sallys already, and so her name became Sunshine Sue.

Sue plans eleven OLD DOMINION BARN DANCE programs each week, and serves as mistress of ceremonies for most of them. A unit from the barn dance troupe puts on a Sunshine-Sue-planned program at various places in Virginia, North Carolina or Maryland several times each week. Sue appears with most of these units.

Son Bill, who is 12 years old, and little daughter, Virginia Sue, four years old, come in for a great share of Sue's attention. The Workmans are now Virginians and own a 196-acre farm, Medley Grove, in Hanover County, Virginia.

On Sundays, Sue plays the organ and John is an elder at King's Chapel Presbyterian Church, quarter a mile from the farm. In the afternoon they relax with the children by fishing on the banks of the South Anna River, a mile of which borders their farm.
