A Monster On His Hands

President Eisenhower outlined an acceptable program in January of last year when he moved into the White House. Instead of pushing that program, he remained idle on the sidelines.

While Mr. Eisenhower was gently patting McCarthy on the back of the hand, his party was devoting its time to arguments over the Bricker amendment, confirmation of Chief Justice Earl Warren, Senator Chavez's right to his senatorial seat, ways and means of turning the country, lock, stock and barrel, to the mighty few, and just about everything else that offered little hope for sustaining the economy for all.

The President's program has bogged down. Where a three billion dollar deficit was contemplated, one of six billion dollars is in prospect. The developments cause one to wonder if the present administration is capable of handling its obligations.

All's Not Well In Washington

The Chicago Tribune, that arch Republican journal, blasted away at the administration in Washington a short time ago, declaring: "Congress should call the Secretary of State to account, provided of course President Eisenhower does not act first to rid himself of a bungling subordinate."

When old man McCormick blasts away at the administration, everyone can know that all's not well in Washington even though there was a change in political personnel. The Tribune was talking about the ravel deal the people got when Secretary Weeks fired a scientist who was trying to protect the people against a commercial fraud.

Benson Blunders Again

Secretary of Agriculture Benson has again displayed his lack of understanding of the tobacco and similar programs, under which farmers have been assured fair prices without any cost to the government.

Mr. Benson has long been on record against high support prices, when they are needed. He favors instead, flexible supports which would be highest when least needed and lowest when most needed. The Secretary of Agriculture has also indicated previously that he is opposed to compulsory control of production, the only method by which most commodities can be controlled specifically.

Secretary Benson has now gone a step further. He is opposed to referendums by which farmers vote on whether controls should be imposed, with a two-thirds majority necessary to impose controls. The secretary says that this is a special privilege to the farmer and that laborers and other groups should have the same privilege if it is given to the farmer. The answer does not hold. In the farm referendums, the farmer is voting to surrender something in return for something else. No farmer likes to be told what he can plant on his own land. However, intelligent tobacco growers and some other farmers have long since learned that price supports are practical only when production is controlled and that effective control can be secured only by statute. That is why tobacco farmers have year after year voted for compulsory controls by margins ranging from 90 to 98 per cent.

He who has lost honor can lose nothing more.—Publilius Syrus.

Feeding Itself

Martin County, one of the best balanced units in the nation, is improving its rating gradually.

Martin farmers are now raising forth with a supply of quality eggs that will meet the demand, and club members and farmers are forging ahead in the beef cattle program. While egg production is believed nearing the demand, beef producers have a long way to go before it will not be necessary to import a carload of meat to meet the market needs in this section.

Considerable attention is being centered in the cage egg business just now, and towns in this county have been designated as "pick up points" for the quality product. It is just another step toward self-sufficiency in the county.

Economic adversity may come, but Martin County is in a splendid position to feed itself and have some to spare.

Can't Afford To Drop Out Now

Despite unfavorable marketing conditions this section can't afford to drop out of the cattle picture now. It is admitted that the area has hardly made more than a dent with its cattle program, but, lead by 4-H club members and Future Farmers of America, Martin County is traveling in the right direction.

There is no question about the place livestock holds in the future economy of eastern North Carolina agriculture, and the sooner it is established on a sound basis the better it will be for all.

The fat stock show in the county this week-end should not be treated lightly. Encouragement should be given those who are paving the way for the expansion of a badly needed industry.

In The Dog House

The fastest disappearing act recorded in recent years has been pulled by the "Hound's Tooth Club," a Republican organization who maintained that every candidate must have a record as clean as a hound's tooth.

It is believed that the club members are far back in the proverbial dog house, nursing a terrifying toothache while McCarthy and Company run wild on the American scene. And just about the time a daring member sticks his head out the door, the irresponsible ones get a charge from Secretary Weeks's battery additive, and the escapade is on again in a bigger and better way.

With the irresponsible ones arrayed against the United States Army at this time, it is now not at all certain the hound tooth club members will ever get out of the dog house.

Not On Shaky Ground

Even though materialism, immorality, corruptness and lethargy are eating away at its very foundation, we don't believe the fate of this nation rests on a shaky foundation. Surely, the faith and deeds woven into our nation's foundation by the founding fathers and nourished by righteous and fair-minded men down through the years will not fail the tests applied by the McCarthys, the Jenners and the skeptics.

Only recently the Cook County (Chicago) Council of the Legion appealed to the State Department to ban certain Protestant delegates to the Evanston meeting of the World Council of Churches. Dr. Franklin Fry, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, had the following timely comment. "It is difficult to understand the psychology of any American who is so uncertain of the correctness of the American position that he fears a few men can corrupt the entire American nation."

If we would preserve this nation's foundation we must drown out those who dare oppose it by our own good deeds and our loyal support to those principles propounded by the founding fathers.

A Record Accomplishment

The gains acquired by the people over a period of twenty years will have been lost to them in four years if the present administration maintains the tempo of its recent accomplishments.

The Republicans have dished out the oil lands, rivers and streams, opened the grazing lands, altered the tax structure, all for the benefit of the comparatively few.

Commenting on the big oil give-away, Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court warned, "Today powerful political forces are marshalled to wipe out previous Supreme Court decisions, for the benefit of the favored few."

ALIKE

There is, so to speak, a greater resemblance than appears on the surface between prayer-meetings and peace conferences; the people who need them least attend.—Troy Record.
