AN OPPORTUNITY LOST

Last year, it was advocated in this newspaper that the State of North Carolina establish a bond issue to loan money to counties to acquire land on which to build airports.

Had the Legislature taken hold of the idea, many counties at this time might be relieved of a difficult and burdensome problem. Roanoke Island for instance, has recently been deemed of great importance for a modern airport, both the Army and the Navy consider an airport on the Island of value to National Defense, and the Civil Aeronautics Authority has set up $404,000 as a starter on this work, and is in a hurry to go to work at once.

Had the legislature anticipated the great development in aviation, and made it possible to aid the nation readily in this respect, the work on the airport might now be well underway. But as it is, the work is delayed while public spirited men go about on their own time, trying to quickly raise money to buy the necessary land.

It is often difficult to raise money on short notice, for in many instances those who would gladly chip in their share, have other obligations which press them. Fortunately it looks as if the airport will be made possible. But when it is, the man to thank will be John E. Ferebee, a public spirited citizen of the Manteo vicinity who on his own time, has led the movement to raise money, going from this acquaintance to that one, and seeking the loan of $100 to $2,000.

John Ferebee next to Dave Driskill may be called the guiding star of aviation in Dare County. If the airport is completed with its 4,000 foot hard surface runways, and its seaplane ramp leading in from the deep waters of Croatan Sound, Roanoke Island will have an airport that can handle the largest and fastest ships of all types. It will be unique along the coast of North Carolina. It will place Roanoke Island and surrounding section in a most advantageous position to take care of air tourist business for many years to come.

But the time will come when the State will be driven to establish a fund to take care of future aviation needs. Every community will not be so fortunate as Roanoke Island in being located so strategically from the defense viewpoint. Many communities needing an airport will have to do the whole job themselves. Roanoke Island's good fortune is something that should make its people thank their lucky stars, make greater sacrifices and work all the harder to get this great improvement quickly.

DAVE DRISKILL, FLIER

Speaking of aviation, there is a man whose loss to Dare County would be keenly felt. Dave Driskill is connected with the National Park and may soon be transferred some distance from Dare County. But he has done a great thing for this section. He has taught the people the advantages of aviation in the development of the Carolina coast. When he came to Manteo, many were skeptical of airplanes. But gradually he won the confidence of young and old by his safe and skilful flying. It wasn't long before he was taking up citizens of all ages, from 85 down to infants. Consequently, Roanoke Island soon became boosters of aviation. And many sportsmen, who might never have come to this section, came to fish and hunt all along the North Carolina coast, taking advantage of Driskill's taxi-plane service, and thereby making this locality something of headquarters.

A great help to Driskill was a group of Manteo people who jumped in and financed the first airplane. Later Stanley Wahab, businessman of Ocracoke and Baltimore came into the picture. He was quick to see the advantages of modern air travel with a great American flier like Driskill to manage it.

Saturday night, October 18th, Mr. Wahab, with a group of citizens from along the coast, will meet with a group of businessmen from Baltimore, at Ocracoke Island, to plan an air route on a large scale, along the coast, and serving the whole coast. Out of that meeting is expected to evolve something of great interest to this section.

Within five years, aviation will have grown by such leaps and bounds that one will marvel at the unconcern of today. The place that gets on its toes now, is the place that will be on top then. Those communities that neglect to see the demands of airtravel, will be sadder and wiser. We of this section are fortunate in having men with the vision of Wahab and Driskill and the others who have aided them, for we may hope for great advantages as a result in the near future.

AUTUMN IN THE SOUTHERN ALBEMARLE

Maybe the hot weather is most over. Indian summer will be dwelling with us. It is no lovelier anywhere than in the Southern Albemarle Counties of Dare, Hyde, Tyrrell. We sometimes think it is lovelier here than anywhere else in the world. For in the afternoon when the sun sinks low, and rose and purple, and blue mingle royally across the broad waters with the setting sun, there is no more glorious picture anywhere.

There is nothing that compares with the quiet that settles down along the country roads in evening as smoke curls lazily from chimneys, and every sound is a distant one. Afar off is the baying of a dog, or the laughter of little children, or the rustling of geese overhead.

It is a most delightful time of the year. Morning begins crisp and cool, when there is a joy in working, and a tingle in the blood that sets one to dreaming, and arouses memories of the distant past and ambitions of the future. It fires one's blood to see men bringing in the harvest, providing for another winter; with the fields marked by stacks of new mown hay, with hogs fattening in the pens, and chickens allowed to run further in the fields.

If one would enjoy Indian summer at its best, he should begin at any point in the Southern Albemarle. He should take in Columbia, Swan Quarter, and Manteo on his travels, the inevitable triangle of travel which embraces three counties. He would then view Mattamuskeet and see the fertile farms of Hyde; he would come through the fishing villages of the Dare mainland; he would cross Croatan Sound and see the ocean; he would witness the magnificence of Tyrrell, with its nearby Lake Phelps region and Pettigrew Park.

Here is the place to spend Indian summer. Quail shooters, deer shooters, bass fishermen, ocean fishermen, history lovers, or those who seek only the solid comforts, this is the place to come, the Southern Albemarle.

CHRIST OUR SAVIOUR

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 20:25-28; Luke 19:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

"I believe in God, the Father Almighty, and in Jesus Christ His only Son, our Lord. . . I believe in the Holy Ghost." How often we have solemnly repeated these words in the Apostles' Creed, and how appropriate it is that our present three month series of lessons on great Christian teachings should begin last Sunday with a study of God, the Creator and heavenly Father, and continue today with Christ the Saviour, and present next Sunday the Holy Spirit, the Comforter.

These are profound Christian truths, but at the same time they are so simple as to be grasped by the youngest child. Today we have the great privilege of presenting in our classes our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. He was

I. The Self-Denying Servant (Matt. 20:25-28).

Scripture clearly teaches that God's standards are not the same as the world's standards, and that His methods of operation are just the opposite of those of the world. All too often Christians and churches imitate the world both in principle and practice, with disastrous results. Consider

1. The False Greatness of the World (v. 25). "Rulers"—"greatness"—"exercise authority"—how altogether up-to-date these words sound. They are the big and swelling words of the small hearts and minds which rule after the manner of this world. They epitomize the ambitions of the great majority of mankind, but they are definitely non-Christian. We see that as we go on to consider

2. The Humility of True Greatness (vv. 26, 27). Service in the spirit of humility and self-sacrifice—this is the standard of Christ. Yes, and it is His command to His followers. To be great for Christ one must become the servant of others. This teaching appears all through Scripture (for example, see Luke 4:11; John 13:13-17; I Pet. 5: 6).

How often service in the church is rendered in a spirit of pride, self-glory, and for the commendation and reward of men. When that reward is not forthcoming or some real humbling sacrifice is required, the work is not desired or the worker becomes offended. Here is one of the roots of trouble in the church. Let us put it away as we look upon

3. Christ our Example (v. 28). He paid the price of our redemption, going to the death of Calvary for us. From the highest glory which He had with the Father (John 17:5), He graciously stooped to dearest ignominy as He became sin for us (II Cor. 5:21). Throughout both His life and His death He perfectly represented that self-denying, self-humbling service which He expects of His followers.

II. The Seeking Saviour (Luke 19:1-10). There is much that is precious and beautiful to be said about our Lord, but perhaps nothing which brings Him so close to needy humanity as the fact that He had "come to seek and to save that which was lost" (v. 10). He was

1. Ever Interested in Sinners (vv. 1-7). Jesus was on this occasion coming up to Jerusalem for the last time. The cross was ahead. He was much taken up with His coming death and greatly straitened in spirit (see Mark 10:32 and Luke 12:50). He was passing through the great and wicked city of Jericho, yet in the midst of His deep sorrow and out of the vast multitude of that city He reached out to touch one sinner.

Zacchaeus was a man despised for his calling of tax collector, and hated for his dishonesty. He was an outcast from his own people and a stranger to God's grace, but Jesus was interested in him. Are we ready thus to go to seek and save the lost? Are we better (or busier) than

WE SHALL SEE

(Jacksonville Record)

We haven't heard yet just what Governor Broughton's reaction on the sandy roads of the North Carolina coast was after his recent week end there with members of the State Department of Conservation and Development, but we can't help wondering to what extent The Wilson Daily Times' prophecy in anticipation of His Excellency's visit materialized.

The Times had warned that if the Governor and his party attempted to "negotiate them (the roads) as we have done, they will grant the people of the outer banks a road down the beaches and connect those fine people with a highway."

"When you have stilled in the sand and attempted to push out for about two hours in some instances, and gone out in the woods and picked up brush, and worn your engine out and gone down to the nearest stream and gotten water and poured it into your radiator several times to keep it from burning up; and then when you get out of that rut you slip into another, the fun and frolic of the dunes becomes just so much sand in your eye and destroys the wondrous beauty of the meet of sand and water." The Times continued.

"Those people down there deserve a road. There is nothing finer than driving along by the side of the ocean and looking at the billows as they roll in their restless effort striving to overcome the barriers that beat against their side as they try to reach over into the earth and ask themselves why there is any limit to their effort? It is merely nature striving to succeed.

"But God gave man control over everything on the earth, and since there are only two things on earth, that must develop it, a man and a woman, so they must be given pre-eminence over the forces of nature and only a road on the outer banks can give adequate relief to these people. They have been most patient over the years, waiting for this relief.

"If the Governor and his party will happen to get stuck a few times, they will deeply sympathize with these folks and give them the road, though we want his excellency and his staff to enjoy every minute of their visit."

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my husband, John D. Nelson, who died one year ago today.

I am sad with all my memories Lonely in my heart today For the one I loved so dearly Has forever been called away. I think of him in silence No eyes may see me weep But many silent tears are shed While other are asleep. His Wife, Mrs. J. D. Nelson.

2. Always Able to Save Sinners (vv. 8-10). Zacchaeus was a rich man, but he was a sinner. It is not easy for a rich man to be saved, but it can be done (see Matt. 19: 23-26). Read the preceding verses of that chapter (vv. 16-22) and you learn of another rich man who was not saved, the rich young ruler. He was a far better man than Zacchaeus—honest, upright, honored in his community. How was it that the wicked and despised rich man was saved and the good and respected rich man was lost?

The answer is that the former admitted that he was a sinner and thus made it possible for Christ to save him, while the latter loved himself and his gold more than Christ and shut the door against His redeeming love.
