STIRRED UP A MARE'S NEST.

Judge Kerr's reference in one of his charges to the grand jury a few days ago to the fact that it seemed to him that the west was receiving more of the road money than the east has stirred up a veritable mare's nest.

The Charlotte Observer and the Statesville newspaper almost had spasms and came back at the Judge with fire and brimstone, and thought they had scored a big point in their favor.

These two papers are from the western part of the state. We are giving our readers the opinion of an eastern paper published at Fayetteville that has more reason in it than anything we have seen or read.

The Fayetteville Observer has this to say:

The Statesville Daily and the Charlotte Observer are much exercised over a report that Judge John H. Kerr, in a speech in Pasquotank recently, intimated that there has been more money expended on roadways in the western part of the state than in the eastern part. Straightway the Charlotte Observer is raising its old cry of "sectional feeling" when it is intimated even that more roadway building is being done in the west. Some months ago the Observer dared to hint that the west had been getting done the bigger share of highway work, and Colonel Harris, in righteous indignation, talked or wrote, so fiercely of sectionalism and sectional hatred that we got frightened and drew in our horns.

It does seem strange, though, that the Statesville and Charlotte papers should get so heated as to indirectly reflect on Judge Kerr's character by intimating that, being a candidate for governor, he made his Pasquotank talk for policy's sake. The state highway commission constructed a bridge at Williamston at a cost of $500,000, and the Charlotte paper is throwing that up to Judge Kerr as if it were about all the east deserves. The fact is, we think Judge Kerr was about right. It may be called sectional hatred or what-not, but we take occasion to say that the indications are that the west is going to get the bigger share of the $500,000,000 bond issue. If we are wrong, we will apologize. The west should not be so touchy when there is call for a fair division of the state highway funds. Such behavior tends to show that the west is defending its weak point.

The Charlotte Observer ends its article by saying, "We are hoping that Judge Kerr has been misquoted." What reasonable utterance has the judge been guilty of that the Charlotte editor, in his lofty manner, should hope that Judge Kerr is "not so bad after all"? To use the Statesville paper's words which it wrote in condemnation of Judge Kerr, we will say that the west "should be mighty sure of its ground" before it accuses the east of sectionalism. We might accuse the west of sectional aggrandizement. If the people up there get more than their share of the state highway money, it simply will be because they want it, and can get it, sectionalism or not.

The Charlotte paper says the records show that the state highway money is being equally distributed between the east and the west. Colonel Harris speaks so confidently it is fair to presume he has those records. In justice to both the east and the west, we suggest that he print them.
