ENGLISH MILIONS DO NOT KNOW ABOUT PEANUT

From the Peanut Grower.
You will be interested to know that sales manager De Pencier is already concluding arrangements for a sales representative of the Peanut Growers' Exchange in London, England.

In view of that fact, our growers will find the following article, which appeared in the September 19th issue of the Wholesale Grocers' Review, particularly interesting. It was headed "Forty Million Waiting for Peanuts," and was written by James Jack Ronald, late of Glasgow, Scotland. We reprint it in full:

"There is a fortune awaiting the company that introduces the peanut, in its convenient form, into Great Britain.

"Imagine a nation of many million people, only a few thousand of whom have ever tasted salted peanuts. Picture a city like Chicago, where peanuts are obtainable at every street corner; think of the amount consumed yearly in the western town alone, and then imagine the largest city in Europe—until lately only 3 per cent of the candy stores have ever handled peanuts, and scarcely any groceries stock the peanut in even the familiar forms of butter and other produce.

"In America we have a people that regards the peanut as an everyday food, but in England the peanut market is an almost unexplored field. And it is a field that offers unrivaled opportunities.

"At Hallow'een, millions of brazils, chestnuts and walnuts are consumed in Scotland alone. In ordinary times, not a fraction of that amount is consumed in a month. And the reason is not hard to seek. The British nation as a whole, enjoys nuts, but they have never been educated to them. Manufacturers and wholesalers alike overlook the possibilities of a market that is overwhelming in its promise.

"Nothing is more certain than that the peanut, once introduced, and with the backing of propaganda, such as has been the making of the market over here, would establish itself, and make the fortunes of its introducers.

"As an illustration, pop corn, once an exclusively American confection, attained high popularity only a few months after the first package was sold in London. It can now be obtained, after only a few years of sale, anywhere in the United Kingdom. If this can be done with a confection like pop corn, with absolutely no advertising except window displays, what could be made of the peanut with a steady campaign behind it?

"Nor is it only Britain that offers the peanut, exporter the chance to develop business. In France and Germany there is almost as great an opportunity. And it only needs a little push to set the ball a-rolling."

M. C. BRASWELL DIES IN RICHMOND

News was received here early this morning of the sudden death of Mr. M. C. Braswell, of Battleboro, in the 61st year of his age.

Mr. Braswell had been in the Richmond Hospital for several weeks, and his condition was so favorable yesterday that his brother, Dr. Mark Braswell, who had been with him, returned home.

Early this morning at half past two o'clock, Mr. Braswell got up to get a drink of water and as he did, he dropped dead in his room.

His death is a great shock to his family and friends throughout the State.

The remains will be brought back to Battleboro tonight and the funeral services will take place tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock in Battleboro.

The deceased leaves a wife and four daughters, Misses Mattie May, Vivian, Alice Bryan and Elizabeth. The deceased is a native of Edgecombe county, having lived in this county all his life. He is one of the wealthiest men in eastern North Carolina, and at the time of his death was at the head of one of the biggest mercantile establishments in the State.

He was a fine type of Southern manhood, with a heart full of sympathy and love for his fellow man. No man in the upper section of the county will be missed more than he.

Previous to Egypt's entry into the family of independent nations, while she was under British control, the United States never had a minister on the Nile; Washington was represented by consular officers only. But soon after Egypt became independent a minister plenipotentiary was appointed in the person of Dr. J. Morton Howell.

Dr. Howell met King Fuad at Ras-el-Tin place with much formality. He was escorted by a detachment of the royal body guard, and attended by the grand chamberlain.

Referring to the new diplomacy, the American minister said: "Your majesty is to be congratulated upon the fact that there have been born new ideas and conceptions of diplomacy within the last decade. The most favored and powerful nations of the world today recognize that diplomacy no longer means duplicity and subterfuge, but that 'yes' means 'yes' and 'no' means 'no.' That which is true of the law governing the rights and practices of individuals towards another collection of individuals must in a very large measure, be likewise true of nations in their intercourse with one another.

"If these methods are followed, as I am sure your majesty intends that they be followed, continuous prosperity and contentment will bless your reign, and your majesty will be a lasting benediction to the people of your majesty's kingdom.

"Apocryph of these changed ideas in the matter of diplomacy, the words of the chief executive of the United States see timely. He said 'Whoever tries to peer through the veil and perceive the issues and events of the future, must be moved to very earnest supplication that sincerity, simplicity, straightforwardness, moral courage and high honor shall be the square and compass, the plummet and level, by which to shape the conduct and the aims of man.'

The King in his reply expressed his pleasure at receiving an American minister, and assured Dr. Howell of his support and the cooperation of his government in the development of good relations between the two nations.

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 16.—The first diplomatic envoy of the United States to Egypt, calling upon King Fuad, addressed him as the first independent ruler of Egypt in 2,900 years. After this formal introduction, the American diplomat went on to say that diplomacy had entered upon a new stage, duplicity and subterfuge are no longer countenanced, he declared; honesty and sincerity have taken their place.

Previous to Egypt's entry into the family of independent nations, while she was under British control, the United States never had a minister on the Nile; Washington was represented by consular officers only. WALTER STANTON The Chantecler Man

(Extract from the Independence, Iowa, Bulletin-Journal):
Walter Stanton, in the chantecler act, is another state fair attraction that was fully up to expectations. In his bird impersonation of a giant rooster, Stanton performed on the race track opposite the grandstand. He comes prancing onto the track and a pretty girl appears and feeds him. Like all roosters he proceeds to show off a little. The lady feeds him and gives him a drink. Stanton flaps his wings and acts just like a big rooster acts. Two young chicks show up and play around the platform. Then the lady brings in a mammoth egg. The big rooster gets gay with the egg and finally breaks it to pieces. Out jumps a bantam rooster and the larger bird proceeds to lord it over the smaller fowl. The latter puts up with the smartness for a while, does some lousy crowing, and finally pounces upon the big fellow and does him battle, the bantam winning the struggle. The larger rooster gets up, somewhat ruffled, crows rather dejectedly but with that air of importance and leaves the scene. Both roosters demonstrate their ability as crows, and the smaller one showed careful training. It is a good act and comes here from the state fairs. Stanton was freely applauded.

COMMISSIONERS ACCEPT LIBRARY

Last night in the rooms of the Library Association, over the First National Bank, the officers of the Edgecombe Library Association formally presented to the town commissioners the library.

There were present a goodly number and these presentation exercises were a great inspiration.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. W. D. Leggett in a few well chosen words and she asked Mr. T. B. Jacobs to give a history of the Association. He said that this association started two years ago and at that time 250 members were secured. During these years all the subscribers had given to the library a fine spirit of co-operation. Two thousand books had been secured and it was estimated that there were 500 readers. At times during this period the outlook was not very bright, but now all the clouds had disappeared, since the City Fathers had taken over the library and made a handsome appropriation.

Mrs. Davis, the librarian, read a very interesting paper on the work and progress of the library and pointed out just what the library should be and what it meant to a community.

Miss Leta Liles spoke briefly on the purpose of the Children's Department and her advice was well worth hearing as she always speaks wisdom and good sense. Miss Liles has done good work among the children and her labors with the children have brought forth fine results.

Mr. Slaughter spoke of the moral force of a library. He congratulated the officials on the great work they had accomplished in this work and stated that such an institution in Tarboro would bear fruit for years to come.

Mayor Foxhall in behalf of the town accepted the library and told those present it was a great pleasure for him to accept this library in behalf of the Commissioners. Mayor Foxhall was mayor when the appropriation of six hundred dollars was made for the library, and he stated that it gave him great pleasure to use his influence for such a worthy cause.

LONDON BUILDING MODERN OFFICES

London, Sept. 27.—Nearing completion on the crest of Tower Hill, its own tower rivaling in height the dome of St. Paul's, is the most impressive, the most palatial, the best lighted and probably the most conveniently arranged group of business buildings ever erected in London.

It is the new palace of the Port of London Authority, the future home of the administration and staff that control all the docks, the wharves, and the commercial life of the Thames. The buildings cost $10,000,000, and are acclaimed by architects as one of the structural treasures of London.

In the English Renaissance style, rich in sculptural reliefs, it is a building of five stories. Each of the four sides faces directly a cardinal point of the compass. There is a frontal portico supported by corinthian columns carried up thru three stories.

Surrounding the portico is a substantial pyramidal tower in the front niche of which is a great figure of Father Thames, and at the sides are emblematic figures of Commerce and Navigation.

Perhaps the most striking internal feature is a central rotunda 110 feet in diameter, with a glass dome.

POTATO GROWERS MET LAST NIGHT

The sweet potato growers who have joined the potato association held a meeting last night in the Kiwanis Hall to make final arrangements for the delivery of their crops.

About forty growers have signed up to deliver their potatoes. The delivery of these potatoes will begin next Wednesday and Mr. Harris says he will be on hand to accept these potatoes at the potato house in Tarboro.

According to an understanding made at this meeting Mr. Harris, the manager, will be at Mr. Vinton Fountain's farm near Leggett Monday morning from nine to eleven o'clock to give instructions as to gathering these potatoes and grading in the fields. He will also be at the farm of W. H. Killebrew from twelve to two o'clock the same day and from there he will go to W. R. Felton's farm at three o'clock. Tuesday morning he will be at the farm of Mr. B. B. Howell at nine o'clock and from there he will go to the farm of Mr. B. F. Shelton at 11 o'clock.

By this arrangement Mr. Harris will be able to meet nearly all the sweet potato growers in the county and he will be able to give the necessary instruction as to gathering and grading in the fields.

It will be well for all the growers to be at one of these places as they will be able to gather much valuable information that will be of great assistance to them.

The time limit for joining this sweet potato association will be Nov. 1st. After this date no applications will be received. Those wishing to sign up, can see Mr. M. G. Mann at the First National Bank. He will have the papers and will give whatever information that is necessary.

GREEKS FORMALLY ACCEPT TERMS

Constantinople, Oct. 14.—A formal acceptance by the Greeks of the Mudania Armistice agreement was transmitted to all the signatories by the Greek High Commissioner at Constantinople.

A ROARING FIRE AT JENKINS TANKS

When the fire company reached the oil tanks of J. L. Jenkins yesterday afternoon they saw a fire that looked dangerous.

From some cause or other a spark from the truck has caught fire and it suddenly leaped to the gasoline that was flowing freely from the tanks near by. These flames also caught on the ground and for a while it looked as if nothing could stop it. It was impossible to get the truck away, and this was destroyed. Finally Mr. Carpenter turned off the gas from the tank and the fire company by hard work and a great supply of water managed to beat out the flames by pure pressure.

The water poured on the ground and rolled up the mud and at last smothered the fire. A 240 pound pressure from the La France engine saved the day, or else there is no telling just where these roaring flames would have stopped. Great credit is due the fire company for the work they did with their splendid outfit.

The gas truck is a total loss. The sheds over the tanks are all burned and the damage cannot as yet be ascertained, says Mr. Jenkins.
