WILL THERE BE 30 CENT COTTON?

The Textile Bulletin edited by Mr. Clark seems to think that 30 cent cotton will be realized in the future.

The figures he gives in an editorial of his paper is very encouraging to growers of cotton and it is hoped that his predictions may be true, as the cotton farmers at time need all the money they get for their produce.

It has been said that cotton might hit the 25 cent mark by the first of the year, but the present prices have been beyond all expectations, well, as said Mr. Grady, cotton fool, when you expect it to go up, it will go higher, and when you think it ought to go higher, it just the other way.

In a recent issue of the Bulletin, Mr. Clark gives some very interesting figures. He says:

The National Bureau has given the estimated crop for 1922 as 3,170,000 bales but he believes that 2,000 will be nearer correct.

2 crop 2,800,000
1, 1922, carry-over 1,900,000

Total supply Am. mills 11,700,000
Estimated consumption of American cotton 13,000,000
July Aug. 1, 1922 1,700,000
These figures mean that there will be less than 1,700,000 bales of American cotton in the world on August 1, and from this must be secured the supply from August 1st to the new cotton is available and all to keep enough on the way to hope to keep her mills supplied.

figured from the standpoint of United States alone we have the following:

1st, 1922 carry-over 2,828,000
U. S. 2 crop 9,800,000

Total supply in U. S. 12,628,000
Consumption & Exports 12,100,000

U. S. Aug. 1st, 1922 528,000
The man who can see more than half million bales in the United States on August 1st, 1922, bases his estimate upon his wishes rather than on statistics.

The higher cotton goes the tighter many farmers hold and it will be used to reduce the amount in the farmers' hands to less than 500,000 bales.

Realizing the probably scarcity the speculators will certainly acquire an amount that may be estimated at 500,000 bales.

American mills can not secure in cotton the day they use it and usually carry a stock of 500,000 bales. Europeans mills must only have a stock of cotton on hand but always must have a supply of 500,000 would be a requirement for them.

The 500,000 probable carry-over in the United States on August 1, 1922 crop not only supply the American mill until the new cotton comes in but must cover the farmers' holdings, the speculator's holding and provide that allot for Europe. Those who can see lower prices under such circumstances must have a peculiar vision.

and the end is not yet for the real buyer force in cotton is going to be the 1922 crop which must be 12,000,000 bales if the year from August 1, 1922 to August 1, 1923 is to be passed without mill standing idle for lack of cotton.

We have opened one crop of 7,000,000 bales this year (1922) and both being the results of the crop which went into Georgia and the Carolinas. In spite of the fact that we have only one 12,000,000 bale crop in nine years.
