Christopher Wilhellim Hooftand, Professor of that University of Jeno, Private physician to the King of Prussia, and one of the greatest writer-Germany has ever produced. He was emplained by the enemy of humbing, and therefore a medicine of which by was the inventor and induster may be confidently relied on. He specially recommended it in Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Debitity, Vertigo, Audacity of the Stomach, Constipation, and all other complaints arising from a disordered stomach, the liver and the intestince. Nine Philadelphia papers express their conviction its effects from their own individual experience. Under these creemstances, we feel warrested, not only a calcing the attention of our readers to the present proprietor's (Dr. C. M. Jackson's) preparation, but in recommending the article to all afflicited."
