The Tar Heels Play Ball Now

None Can Stand Before the Invincibles. Five Scalps Hang to Chief Guiheen's Belt. Elizabeth City Now Neck and Neck With Portsmouth.

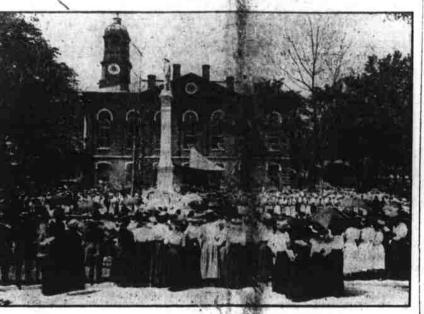

"The Tar Heels can certainly play ball." That's what the Elizabeth City fans are saying. Went against the nemy five times this week and routed them in each game.

The climax of a brilliant series of victories was reached yesterday aftrnoon, when the Tar Heels defeated the Rookies in an eleven innings game, the most magnificent ever witnessed here- in a score of two to one.

It was a pitcher's battle and Robertson, affectionately known as "Big Boy", and Hogue of the Rookies pitched a great game. Robertson struck out nine, and Hogue seven. The Tar Heels played errorles ball, and the Rookies got only two to their account. Bundy's base runming was a feature, and Moreland's batting caused the fans to hold their breath. In three bits, he landed a two bagger and a three bagger and it was the lost of these that broght the wind ng run in the diezen:b

Schools Close The Years Work

Commencement Exercises Of The Elizabeth City Graded Schools Held Wednesday and Thursday. Large Crowds In Attendance.

On Thursday of this week the session of the Elizabeth City Graded Schools came to a close. The occasion was marked by appropriate Commencement exercises in the auditorium of the high school building.

These exercises began with a musical selection rendered by Misses Celia Umphlett and Maud Williams. This was followed by an essay, "The Dismal Swamp," written and read by Miss Eula Wood.

This essay was written in competition for a gold medal offered by the North Carolina Historical Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, and won the medal. The essay was a very instructive and well written one, and was read by Miss The reading of the essay was followed by a musical selection rendered by little Miss Alma Winslow, a first year pupil in music. She show ed marked proficiency for one who has been studying music for so short a time and reflected credit upon herself and her teacher.

But the most delightful event in he program was "Midsummer Eye."

played the part of pages. Misses Fannie Owens and Eloise Cahoon were Arbutus and Innocence, while Miss Margaret Sheep was the Spirit of the Dawn.

It is hardly necessary to say that the evening's entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

On Thursday night the regular graduating exercises took place. After the invocation the class song was sung, and then Miss Clara Covert rendered a piano solo, Raphsodie Hongroise, from Liszt.

This was followed by the annual address, delivered by Hon T W. Bickett, the State's Attorney General. This address was a splendid one, and was heard with a great deal of interest. Mr. Bickett is an orator of renown, and in his effort he susned his former reputation. After the address Miss Covert at the plano rendered "The Last Hope," by Gottschalk.

Attorney ' E. F. Aydlett of this city then presented the diplomas to the graduating class, composed of Misses Nellie Robbins Wood, Elonia Margaret Brothers, Minne Bell Haight, Eula Gregory Wood, and

About a thousand noisy, shouting screaming fans witnessed the game and went mad with joy. The following is the score: Elizabeth City 000 001 000 01-2 Norfolk 000 001 000 00-1

COLUMBIA BANK TO BE RE-OPENED.

Directors Raise Necessary Money to Put Institution in Good Condition.

Raleigh, N. C., June 1 .- The Merchants and Farmers Bank of Columbia, Tyrrell county, N. C., closed by order of the North Carolina Corporation Commission because of irregularities is to be reopened.

A telegram from the State Eauk Examiner who closed the bank says that the directors have raised the necessary money and the bank will be reopened at once.

The following communication was sent out today from Raleigh in regard to the affairs of the Farmers and Merchants bank of Columbia.

The announcement that the bank will be opened at once will be welcome news to depositors of the bank. This bank was examined by the State Bank Examiner last week and was ordered closed until its affairs could be properly adjusted. It was reported that large amountss of worthless papers had been unloaded on the bank and that its affairs were in bad shape. Its a great relief to the the friends of the institution to learn that the affairs were not in such a bad plight after all Expressions of regret are heard every hand over the unfortunate suicide of Mr. Spruill, who let the affairs of the bank prey on his mind, until he committed the act.

Large crowds are attending the Grice. See their ad on another page of this issue.

The High School has not lost a game this season, though they have been unable to secure very many, corking good tears next year.

> At the beginning of the play the stage was darkened and little Miss Pauline Beveridge clad in simple and flowing robe of white, entered as Dorothy, the maiden lost in the forest at night. Told by "Nursie" that one wandering in the woods at midnight on midsummer eve will be sure to find the fairles, she has stolen from her bed and gone out to seek them. The clear full notes of her voice as she sings her call to the fairies to come and show her the way to her home fall most pleasantly upon the cars of the audience, for the little maid has a splendid voice for one of her years.

She is unfortunate, however, for it is the will-o-the-wisps instead of the fairies who hear her call; and lured by their dancing lanterns and merry music she decldes to follow of a child as she leaves the stage.

But meanwhile what has become of Dorothy? Just at this point the little green elves dance in to tell her story. they have rescued her from the will-o-the-wisps and pray the Queen's permission to bring her in to see the fairles hold their court. Their request is graciously granted and Arbutus and Innocence are sent to conduct the stranger in. She is given a fairy robe, and becomes the Princess Forget-me-not.

Then the fairies hold high carnival under the woodland arches until the herald announces that the signal for the night's revels to close. Dorothy is given safe conduct to her home, and with a chorus to the dawn the court adjourns.
