NOTHING LIKE CHILDREN

The formula for a happy and successful marriage," Mrs. Tom Etneridge of Manteo is quoted as saying, "is children." The Ethridges celebrated their 25th anniversary as man and wife Friday night. Their family is an excellent one, one son and four daughters, with two of the girls twins, and the oldest daughter married.

Come to think of it, it does seem that many more childless marriages than the other kind go on the rocks. All men and all women, with possibly a few abnormal exceptions love their children. The love of children and of home stirs the pride and makes the heart beat with desire for achievement more than anything else in the world. The happy woman is the busy woman, bbusy with her household cares and with preparing a place of cheer and comfort, that is warmed with the affection of loving herts for the evening reunion of father, mother and child.

The successful man is a man with a goal in life. Men with children have a goal to look forward to, and their pride drives them on to achieve it. Men who are men cannot dare face the prospect of children being ragged or hungry, and women who are women cannot bear the thought of some other place becoming more inviting than the home which is her own responsibility.

years in memory, and always standing out are those citizens who were thoughtful, kind, patient, industrious, resourceful and self-reliant; who always had plenty to wear, and when their days were ended, left something for those who survived them. They will be found mostly people with large families of children.

Such folk truly are the salt of the earth The men with most to do, usually have most time to give to the welfare of their community. The women who have contributed most to society have never been the women who spend their time in meetings and conventions, hearing themselves talk, and passing resolutions deploring the wicked trend of modern youth. The truly helpful women have remained home, busying themselves at their own firesides, training from the cradle up, their offspring in the way they should go, making happy husbands, and leaving behind them generations to rise up and call

The wealth of this country, the safety of its future citizenship is not in the amount of land one may acquire, nor the gold that fairly large family groups by consecrated mothers and industrious fathers.

A lot of experts are talking about things that they do not kr w too much about.

Individuals who pay heavy taxes are rarely pleased with any tax measure.

To think before you speak is very good provided you think long enough.

Our own opinion is that Czecho-Slovakia will have a hard time pleasing Mr. Hitler.

Very few people in Manteo forget the names of those who owe them money.

What has become of the old-fashioned boy who used to memorize poetry?

MAKES ONE FEEL BETTER

To drive on the ferry now, and go Manns Harbor for half what one paid before, if not quite the same thing as a free ferry, makes one feel a lot better than before It will increase travel between Manteo and the mainland.

It makes it much easier to travel to see our friends in Hyde County and Tyrrell County and points west. And it won't be long before we will have improved roads and then bridges.

Many thanks are due to the Highway Commission, to Capt Tom Baum, and to President Wallace Tatem of the Southern Albemarle Association for his persistence in making clear to the Commission the need for better ferry service.

WE'VE LOST OUR GUTS

"Are you still worried because business is dull?" asked the Old Sea Captain of the Drummer .The two usually met on the porch of Stowe & Company when the latter made his weekly rounds in search

It doesn't look any too good," said the Drummer to the Old Sea Catain. "My customers are complaining that they have to sell all their neighbors on credit, and then the customers send their money to mail order houses."

"Well, who's to blame for that ?" asked the Old Sea Captain .

"I don't know," said the Drummer, "but it doesn' t look quite right."

"Lots of things don't look right," said the Old Sea Captain, "but the merchants are as much to blame as anybody for letting folks get too far in The couples with children will always be debt. Merchants have gotten too greedy for money, the happy couples. People are so made, and and business, just like the rest of the people, and it is so intended. Go back through the long when a merchant encourages a man with a $40 income to buy$80 worth of goods, he is mighty short sighted."

> "Anyway," said the Drummer; "it has brought this country to a bad state of affairs. And everybody has gone so far in debt they never hope to get out, and they have got used to comfortable living, and now because the merchants are broke and can't let forty dollar men have a hundred dollars worth of luxuries, folks are down in the dumps."

> "It seems a mighty odd thing, that in a nation which is the greatest of he great, with more machines, men, and money and everything else to draw from, should have the blues worse than any other nation. When you think of the wars and riots that take place in other nations, our lot is roses, comparison." The Old Sea Captain said.

> "I guess after awhile folks will rise up and tackle the situation," said the Drummer. "You know our folks come into this country, toted a gun with which to fight off the savages, while they went to church, they tackled the wilderness, and they feared nothing but God and the Devil. They migrated across the desert, crossed mountains, and built fortunes upon their hardships."

"Now on the other hand, my boy, you can't drive may be stored in banks, but in the hope and them to church with a shotgun," said the Old Sea pride and ambitions, that are instilled in Captain. "They don't fear God, they have taken Devil in as a full fledged member in all their affairs, and folks who used to have guts filled with cornbread, and hard hog meat, now might be Xrayed and found to contain nothing more than mayonaisse, devilled-egg, wind and 7-up. All this country needs is a little guts, but folks don't have it now, because easy living has destroyed their courage, their self-reliance and their idleness has encouragd them in so much mischief among each other, they have lost faith in their fellowman. Having lost faith in one another, they have lost their faith in God."

> "What do you think will happen?" asked the Drummer. "I think God will humble his people more than has yet been done. It looks cruel, but you will recall that when all Sodom burned, or when the whole world was flooded, and the innocent suffered with the wicked '

Without awaiting an answer, the Old Sea Captain turned and walked toward the sea.

HONEYMOON REMINISCENCES GREATLY DEPLORED TO REPRESENT DARE

DOROTHY MITCHELL-HEDGES on the right, recently separated from her husband in England returned to America, and has given in some of her so-called honeymoon experiences to a ghost writer, and from her husband in England returned to America, and has given in some of her so-called honeymoon experiences to a ghost writer, and sold her articles to feature magazines, such as King features, and the Hearst papers. She purports to tell of her experiences on her honeymoon at Hatteras, and trading on her husband's fame and reputation as an explorer and writer, she has gained considerable credence. However, the type of stories, and the gross exaggerations in them, are apt to do much harm to the coast country, and Mr. Mitchell-Hedges himself is mighty quick to repudiate them according to his statement elsewhere in this paper.

Mrs. Mitchell-Hedges, a ppretty 32 year old widow, met her husband in New York; admits she wanted to go with him on his rough trips for fishing and exploration, and came first to Hatteras fer stories of poisonous snakes at Hatteras are overdrawn; an imaginative story of fighting a wild marsh cat is ridiculous, and the yarn about the sand cutting paint from her house is an hallucination. Her home was comfortable, and attractive, sheltered in the pine woods at Frisco, and she told people she liked it at the time. In fact, the couple lived comfortably at Frisco, apparently happy, and were delightful hosts, they had a man servant and a maid, and enjoyed bridge games at night with their neighbors, particularly the young Doctor and Mrs. Leighton Avner of the Cape Hatteras CCC camp, and other distinguished friends who came down from New York. Often the bride expressed delight at being able to accompany her husband on his fishing trips, professed great interest in his work, and his sport, and seemed much delighted, when she landed a 50-pound channel bass in the surf at Hatteras, which she is shown holding up, while her husband photographed it, with Jane, the secretary. At Hatteras he wrote his most recent book, the enormously successful "B urge to ramble, again, she seemed anxious to go with him to the tropics. It was while in Panama his broker advised he had lost his fortune in Wall Street, so he had to return to England and to the income from his property there. Mrs. Mitchell-Hedges says he gave her $400 and told her to come home.

People liked Mrs. Mitchell-Hedges well, and her friends here prefer to think her ghost writer took advantage of her, exaggerated her stories, and colored them too highly. At any rate the finished product as they appeared in print are much resented and considered highly detrimental.
