APPRECIATION

To my friends of the First Judicial District:

I am without words sufficient to express my thanks and appreciation for the vote and confidence you gave to me on Saturday. I wish that I could see each and every one of you and thank pou personally, but I know that is impos-

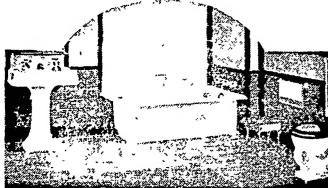

My friends have been loyal friends, you merit my thanks and I sincerely extend them.

To my friends over the entire district who supported my opponents I desire to say that you have been, as have my opponents, very fair. This has been a hard fought campaign, yet one which has been conducted on a very high plane. I appreciate your fairness to me the whole way through.

To one and all I extend my thanks and appreciation.

Sincerely, CHESTER MORRIS

radiant smile on my gentle mother's face as she raised her eyes giving thanks and praises to our Heavenly Father who helps and guides us all; if only we all could have that sweet faith and confidence in him that dear mother had.

Sweet memories of the little gray school school house where some thirty of my little playmates and myself whiled away many a happy hour. There we were taught the seventh grade; were taught to fear God, to love and do for each other. And the good old tots in the Sabbath School; that we should not steal our neighbors peaches, but ask for them; of the man in the moon burning sticks because he gathered sticks on the Sabbath day; Frank the bad boy who fell through the ice for dis obeying his parents.

All were powerful lessons that are never forgotten, and had a strong impress on us subconsci ously guiding us in the future when we might have wavered between a course of right and wrong.

We can never forget the inspiring thoughts that stirred within us, the desire to do better and to live rightly, and to love our fellowman, as we heard those good old hymns

Those things week after week molded our thoughts and impressed our lives, and we shall never be the worse for having learned

Most of the dear old friends I them knew, among them the noble old men of the Coast Guard are no longer with us. They have crossed the bar the last time; they have been landed safely ashore on the promised land.

But often as I sit by my fireside, dreaming at the end of the day, I forget the troubles of the present, the unrest and the dissatisfaction, the many vexations, and amidst sweet memories live over again the joyous moments of my childhood in those carefree days so close to God and nature, in my early home with mother on the

BEER STATESMANSHIP From The Emporia Daily Gazette

It has become obvious ever since the repeal of prohibition that the American brewers were determined not to make the mistake that the brewers made in pre-prohibition days. Then they tied up tightly with the distillers and beer was classed indis-criminately with liquor. The brewers are now trying to get away from the distillers, and a year ago they adopted an independent code, pledged them-selves to "conduct their business in conformity with established laws and selves to "conduct their business in conformity with established laws and in co-operation with the authorities." Further, they pledged themselves to support "duly constituted authorities for the elimination" of anti-social condition in the beer business. They pledged themselves to get behind the "great body of retailers who sell beer as iaw abiding citizens" and also to back up authorities in preventing "beer sales to minors or persons who have drunk to excess." The code aimed high.

It was obvious that Kansas is the aimed high.

It was obvious that Kansas is the one place in the United States where the United States where the United States where the United States where the United States Brewers' Foundation, which was back of the code, with offices in New York, could come and finu a fertile field to try out the code. They sent a representative of the Foundation to Kansas. He went to work in a practical manner He surveyed the beer business in the large counties of Kansas where, if anywhere, the code would crack. He went to the sheriffs and the county attorneys in these counties. He went to the Attorney General of Kansas and told the law enforcing officers everywhere that he wanted their help and he wanted to help them clean up means business.
