THE DRUNKEN DRIVER

Pull out the old quart bottle. With your feet on the throttle And drink till your lamps grow dim.

On the bank of a river, Collide with a flivver And push the ——— thing in.

Run down the ladies, Mince the babies— Forget all about your horn— Prohibition whiskey Puts the RISK in frisky. As sure as you're born.

While the atmosphere is swimmin' Kill a half dozen women And mangle up the poor old man— Your only catechism Is to cure their rheumatism, When your score gets up to ten.

There's an oil truck comin' With the big motor hummin' See if you can bluff this guy, And when your funeral's over, Sleep it off beneath the clover, While the rest of the world goes by!

COUNTY AGENT OFFERS HOME GARDEN HINTS

By C. W. Overman, County Farm Agent.

Are insects eating the vegetables in your garden or are you? For bean beetles, cabbage and collard worms and bugs and other garden insects use Rotenone Dust. Using a duster or a thin mesh bag, dust the plants well during the middle of the day. Be sure to dust the under side of the leaves as well as on top. Dust again each time you see the insects appearing.

You can't grow weeds, grass and vegetables together. Keep the garden worked and free of weeds and grass.

Are you planning for a good fall garden? If not, it is time to do so. Plant the following vegetables now: Snap beans, bush lima beans, cabbage seed and plants, collard seed and plants, tomato plants, carrots, beets, corn, sweet potatoes and field peas.

Fertilize liberally with manure or 5-7-5 fertilizer. Apply fertilizer and prepare rows several days in advance of planting, this gives the fertilizer chance to incorporate with the soil, the chance to settle, and insures better stands.

SUCCESS IN MAKING JELLY NO ACCIDENT

Fine jelly is not so easy to make, after turning out a batch of gummy or syrupy stuff that refused to jell, or perhaps was tough, gummy, dull colored, and without flavor. "Lots of sad things can happen, as any jelly-maker knows," said Miss Sallie Brooks, assistant extension.

A wide, shallow, flat-bottomed kettle is best for cooking the sugar and fruit juice for making jelly. Such a kettle permits rapid evaporation and brings the mixture to the jelling point without the long cooking that spoils the color and flavor.

A cup of sugar for each cup of fruit juice is often used, but sometimes it is best to have a little more juice than sugar, depending upon the kind of juice used. Too much water or excessive fruit moisture will keep the product from attaining the fine quality desired for marketing or for home consumption.

The question of when to take the jelly from the stove is of great importance. Keep dipping a large spoon in the boiling syrup, lifting it up, and allowing the syrup to run off the side of the spoon. It is ready to take off the stove when it will not run off the spoon in a steady stream, but separate into distinct lines of drops which tend to "sheet together."
