HIGHLANDS MUSEUM

ber of Commerce the Museum provides guide service to points of interest for visitors who care to do serious work on the natural resources of the region. There is no charge made for admission to the Museum, nor for any service rendered by it. The Museum is supported by memberships, ranging all the way from twenty cents for children under twelve to one hundred dollars, which insures a life membership in the Institution. Any Southern college, having a department of Biology, may take out an institutional membership, which entitles their graduate students to work in the Laboratory. Often scholarships are made available for specialized research projects. The membership committee is putting on a campaign for new members, with the object of expanding the educational and scientific work of the Museum.

On August 1st, the Board of Trustees met at Highlands Museum to discuss matters of interest, and the annual meeting of the members of the Institution will be held on August 28th at the Lab-
