us tips on intriguing "off the beaten path" places to go when it came our turn to travel. We are fortunate to have such friends.

Once more, I looked out the window and dreamed of travel. But this time I really enjoyed my dreams and they had no tinge of envy. The cat settled in my lap again, quite peacefully.

What was it that had changed my attitude so completely? Was it the subconscious awareness that I was not living up to my best self (my God-self)? That I was being ungrateful? This was the beginning of the change.

The next step — appreciation — was inspired by the graceful flight, across my vision, of one of God's wonderful creatures — the sea gull. And the third step was action: going out to enjoy the morning, regardless of weather, with an increasing sense of gratitude.

I had started the day by feeling sorry for myself (a form of being selfish) because I couldn't travel. And then — within a few short hours — I had gained the realization that I had traveled; that I had taken the greatest journey of all: the one that leads to a higher state of consciousness — onto The King's Highway. "El Camino Real" it was called by the early California Padres. But in my language, in a higher sense, it is God's Way. And it is open to all of His children.

Not all of us have the waters of a beautiful ocean in front of our homes. But we do have that which is even greater — the ocean of His Love. All of us have, in one form or another, beauty in our surroundings; plants and flowers somewhere within our vision, if not in our own yards. Most of us have loved ones and friends; books and music in our homes. All of us have the voice within. We have only to listen and be guided by it.

Let us not try to pull ourselves up by our own bootstraps. Rather, let us remember the words, "be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind"; and "Behold, I make all things new."

May you travel today — on The King's Highway. You will have a Bon Voyage!

and lace, with shoulder-length veil of illusion, the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Cecil McCall.

Others taking part in the ceremony were Bob Munch, who served as his brother's best man, and Charlie McCall, usher.

Mrs. James Howe served at the organ.
