Public and Private Morality

The New York Bookman lately writing of a new and much read book entitled "The Making of an American," by a foreign born boy, now Jacob A. Riis, begins with this very pertinent opinion, that is doubtless true:

"Good men are more frequent than good citizens. Many a man who is kind, fair and honest with his fellow-men in his direct dealings with them is thoroughly corrupt commercially and politically. The common 'heeler' is often an upright, kind-hearted and honorable man, as far as he can see, but he doesn't see far enough to be honest in business, and especially in politics."

It is because of this proneness to evil and low standards of living that we have so often insisted upon the importance, the imperative necessity, of educating the morals as well as the mind or hand. Why shall there be a different standard in our land for personal and political honesty—for a conscience for private life and an obliteration or relegation of that great growing principle in business and public life? Is it not because this as given in the Bookman—that "while the conscience of the community has become developed in regard to private morality, it has not become correspondingly aroused in public morality. 'Get there' is about an only dictum of public ethics in business—believed in by men who have a sensitive conscience in ordinary morality.—Wilmington Messenger.

A few years ago it was said that 40,000,000 advertising calendars have been given away in a single year, at a cost of $1,000,000. This year, it is stated, most of the leading establishments will not distribute calendars, preferring to add the sum they would cost to their newspaper advertising appropriations. Nearly all schemes of publicity are worth something, but it is undeniable that the very best is newspaper advertising.—Philadelphia Record.

The part that cotton seed is playing now in enriching the southern planter is not to be overlooked. It has become indeed a factor of profit, and most important help to the mill owners. A great many cotton seed mills were operating last year, and they used 53 per cent. of the whole seed product. Other mills are building and during 1902 the number will be much increased and old ones are enlarging. The manufactured products from the seeds in 1901, added to the crop, brought up the figures to $419,208,296, increasing the cotton crop $42,411,835. This was from but 53 per cent. If the entire output had been used, it would have been over $80,000,000.—Wilmington Messenger.

Saved Her Child's Life.

"In three weeks our chubby little boy was changed by Pneumonia almost to a skeleton," writes Mrs. W. Watkins, of Pleasant City, O. "A terrible cough set in, that, in spite of a good doctor's treatment for several weeks, grew worse every day. We then used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was soon sound and well. We are sure this grand medicine saved his life." Millions know it is the only sure cure for Coughs, Colds and all lung diseases. For sale by Jno. L. Bailey & Co., Satisfaction guaranteed. 50c., $1.00. Trial bottles free.
