

JOHN WINTHROP'S DEFEAT.

JEAN KATE LUDLUM.

CHAPTER XV.

The halls of tragedy are so often built on the pillars of fate. And the wheels in those grinding mills are fashioned from such spider films of innocence...

Not much to say to you, and you will pardon me if I detain you for a moment. "Three years ago," she said, her eyes meeting levelly now the cold eyes of Palmer Earle...

"What could a woman like yourself know of business claims?" asked John Winthrop. "Oh, yes!" cried Beatrice, in her bitternly distinct undertone...

Her passionate hand touched for one instant the direction of the point where the struggle occurred. "You offered a reward for the man who acted so nobly that night, but he would discover nothing definite enough to satisfy you in placing the reward...

"You shall prove him, Bee," said Alicia, quietly, slipping one hand slowly within her sister's arm. "They will believe that we fear to face them unless we go in at once."

And that evening, with her usual suppositious, Beatrice Field, alert for an opportunity to face Palmer Earle and his counsel with her truth, came upon them in apparent unconsciousness as they loitered on the pier with their cigars before joining the ladies on the piazza.

"Mr. Earle," she said, in her low, steady, distinct voice, her eyes black with her angry spirit, "and you, also, Mr. Winthrop, I have waited very patiently for this moment. I may be to you scarcely upon speaking acquaintance...

his own? Would he not have placed himself in a better light with the world, so doing? There was no man dazed breathing a word against him, but might they not feel that he had been unnecessarily harsh?

"It is possible, after hearing the truth, that Mr. Earle can speak of injustice to himself," she asked. "Was it not from the height of honor that Harold Graham scorned to win your justice by the acknowledgment of your infinity greater debt to him?"

"You are a woman," he said, coldly, "Miss Field. It is your heart that speaks now, not your judgment."

CHAPTER XVII.

A PROUD WOMAN'S ANSWER.

"Mrs. Graham," Alicia was alone in the pavilion on the following morning, watching the early lights upon the ocean ere the breakfast-bell summoned the guests from their rooms. She was an early riser, and enjoyed the freshness of the morning ere she was called to assemble her guests for breakfast.

"Perhaps Mrs. Graham will find it difficult to hear or believe what I have to say," he said, after a moment of utter silence, save for the screeching of the surf upon the sands and the sharp screaming of a gull swooping just over the surface of the water.

"You are mistaken, Miss Field," he said, coldly. "If it were Mr. Graham, that you would not have kept silent, especially at such a time."

"You believe me beyond the pale of friendship at times, Mr. Winthrop, even to doubt my word, ask any of the men who were present that night. I have this from the lips of one of them myself. You find it somewhat too bitter to accept, do you not? Indeed, I wonder that the truth does not strike you dead. I wonder that you can face me and not blush for cruelty to a woman as true and pure as you are hard and unjust and cruel in your arrogance and pride. Were it I, I think, like Judas, I could not endure conscience."

Palmer Earle stopped her as she was turning proudly away. Even his cold heart was stirred by her revelation. Had not Harold Graham been his friend until the day of his misfortune? Should he not have been governed by that and the knowledge of his perfect uprightness—never a stain upon the proud name equal with his own?

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Mr. Roosevelt Makes Recommendations to Congress

SAYS COUNTRY IS PROSPEROUS

He Touches Upon the Trusts, Tariff, Our Foreign Relations and Other Matters of Public Policy.

INTRODUCTION.

To the Senate and House of Representatives: We still continue in a period of unbounded prosperity. This prosperity is not the creature of law, but undoubtedly the laws under which we work have been instrumental in creating the conditions which made it possible.

As a people we have played a large part in the world, and we are bent upon making our future even larger than the past. In particular, the events of the last four years have definitely decided that for war or for peace, our place must be great among the nations.

But our people, the sons of the men who have led their blood, rejoice in the present and face the future with high heart and resolute will. Ours is not the creed of the weakling and the coward; ours is the gospel of hope and of triumphant endeavor.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS. On July 4 last, on the one hundred and twenty-sixth anniversary of the declaration of our independence, peace and amnesty were proclaimed, and the Philippine Islands were placed under the Mohammedan Moros, but with the late insurrectionary Filipinos the war has entirely ceased.

THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT. The striking increase in the revenues of the Post-Office Department shows clearly the prosperity of our people and the increasing activity of the business of the country.

LABOR AND CAPITAL. The relations of labor and capital are discussed in the message in a lucid manner. It is a delicate question, neither party should have the privilege of invading the territory of the other.

CONCLUSION. The reports of the several Executive Departments are submitted to the Congress with this communication. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

on the contrary, these big aggregations are an inevitable development of modern industrial life. The effect, unless destroyed, would be little less than that of the great tidal waves which would sweep the world.

On the subject of an isthmian canal the President commends the action of the past session of Congress, and makes further recommendation that the great work be undertaken as early as practicable.

Arbitration between the United States and the foreign powers is recommended where possible. The army has been reduced to the minimum allowed by law, it is small for so large a nation, and can take pride in both our officers and enlisted men.

CIVIL SERVICE. Gratifying progress has been made during the year in the extension of the merit system of making appointments in the Government service. It should be extended by law to the District of Columbia.

IRRIGATION. The message suggests the reclamation of the arid lands by irrigation and also the protection of game. Of Porto Rico it is only necessary to say that the prosperity of the island and the wisdom with which it has been governed have been such as to make it serve as an example of all that is best in insular administration.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION. The President recommends special care for the Smithsonian Institution, and commends its good work. DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. A number of recommendations follow concerning the proper government of the district.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEES. The recommendation for the enactment of laws for the protection of railway employes is concise and pointed. THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT. The striking increase in the revenues of the Post-Office Department shows clearly the prosperity of our people and the increasing activity of the business of the country.

LABOR AND CAPITAL. The relations of labor and capital are discussed in the message in a lucid manner. It is a delicate question, neither party should have the privilege of invading the territory of the other. CONCLUSION. The reports of the several Executive Departments are submitted to the Congress with this communication. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

MANY WERE RAIDED

Another Moral Spasm Attacks City of New York

GET EVIDENCE WITH DYNAMITA.

District Attorney Jerome Makes a Sensational Raid on Gamblers in Fashionable Quarter.

New York, Special.—District Attorney Jerome's sensational raids on alleged gambling resorts began about midnight Sunday night, were continued until 4:30 o'clock Monday morning and numerous small places were raided. The attacks on the latter, however, were almost overlooked in the public interest which centered in the assault on the mansions occupied by Richard A. Canfield and William Burbridge, which were entered by means of ladders, axes and sledge.

Up to last night a general impression prevailed that Canfield's which is the heart of the fashionable up-town district, only a few doors from Fifth avenue and near two celebrated restaurants, was a " Gibraltar," which could not be taken and a similar belief prevailed in regard to Burbridge's place, which was especially protected by steel doors. This place is in a cross street up-town, only half a block from Fifth avenue and a few steps from a celebrated hotel.

So great was public interest aroused by the news of the raid on Canfield's that people flocked to the neighborhood until the intersection of Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street, the corner nearest Canfield's, was blocked with carriages and people. After Burbridge's raiders visited Ludlum's place, otherwise known as the Savor Club, they got one man there, a colored subordinate employed about the place. Jerome, Captain Popper, Inspector Brooks, several assistants, and the district attorney and numerous detectives were busy in Ludlum's place until after 4 o'clock this morning. They blew open a safe for evidence.

Earlier in the night the district attorney made many raids in the downtown Italian quarter of alleged disorderly houses. These were "preliminaries," as it were, to the big events, Canfield's and Burbridge's. District Attorney Jerome refused to make any statement after his night's work. Captain Laney, of the East Fifty-first street station, in whose precinct the Canfield place has been for years, declared to the reporters and others assembled that he had never expected to live to see such an event as the raiding of Canfield's.

The night raid was expected in every place visited. In Canfield's the owner declared nothing had been "doing" for weeks. It was much the same in Burbridge's and Ludlum's, although Joseph Jacobs, the Citizens' Union detective, last night declared he had played in every place visited. David Bucklin and Sampel J. Smith, who were arrested in the raids, were held $1,000 for examination. The district attorney said that W. Bucklin was the man and Bucklin was arrested. He is said to be Canfield's manager.

New Orleans, Special.—J. Allus Wet, one of the wealthiest cotton merchants of New Orleans, was fined $25 for violating the separate car law. He sat on the side reserved for negroes and refused to go to the other compartment, where there was no empty seat.

Tennessee's Democratic Majority. Nashville, Tenn., Special.—The official returns in the late election have been compiled by the Secretary of State and show a total vote of 167,142. This is a falling off of over 40 per cent as compared with the vote of 1900 and of over 7 per cent as compared with the preceding official year. The vote is as follows: Frazier, 98,984; Campbell, 59,002; Cheves, 2,163. This is a majority for Frazier, Democrat, of 37,789.

Cigarmakers Return to Work. Havana, by Cable.—All possibility of another general strike has ended, as the cigar makers have voted to return to work and the factories were running as usual today. The detachment of artillery from Fort Cabanas, which has been guarding the public buildings in this city since the outbreak of the strike, was ordered back to barracks. The police have reported to the authorities that anarchists from Barcelona, Spain, are in Havana and are supposed to have been in collusion with the Socialistic element during the strike. The authorities are conducting an investigation with a view to the arrest and deportation of these anarchists.

Iron People Get Together. Detroit, Special.—One of the biggest deals ever made in the State of Michigan was consummated in the office of W. C. McMillan here today, when 17 of the leading malleable iron concerns in the United States signed an agreement to form a big company with capital from $16,000,000 to $20,000,000. Nearly 20 firms, including the Ross-Meham Foundry Company, of Chattanooga, are in the combination.
