FLOGGING STUDENTS

STILL IN VOGUE

London, July 1. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)-The old custom of flogging students is still in vogue in British colleges, whose pupils are as old as the average American college men. The custom in most followed in the higher class institutions, so that to have been flogged at school or college is said to be the mark of an aristocrat.

At Cheltenham college the studschooling during the eight years that der of the college baths because he are supposed to be given to elemen- had desorted the baths for higher wages in an aircraft factory. They bombarded Barnwell's house with bricks. Thereupon, Barnwell's work mates with several hundred of the populace marched to the college and told their story to the principal, Archdeacon Waterfield. It was agreed that the students should pay damages and be flogged by the Archdeacon. This was satisfactory to all concerned, including the students.

Because of the number to undergo They castigation, lots were drawn so that not only is a large per cent of the keeper's faction that they proposed that both sides shake hands and call it off, which was done with mutual regrets and compliments.
