CARRY ON FIGHT AGAINST REDS

Russians Determined To Press On Against Odds And Despite Falling Off of Allied Aid

Archangel, July 2. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The British-Russian offensive in North Russia, which was intended this summer to connect with Admiral Kolchak's Siberian army and establish Archangel as a base through which Allied supplies might be handled to all anti-Bolshevik armies in the field, has met with unexpectedly strong resistance on the Dvina river at the same time that Admiral Kolchak's armies have been driven backward into Siberia. Because of insufficient forces, lack of open support by the Allied governments and the fact that natural factors have aided the Bolsheviks, the expedition, according to military opinion in Archangel at this time, may be doomed this summer to a failure equally as bad as that which met last summer's efforts unless large forces are thrown in at once by the Allied governments and a war against the Bolsheviks undertaken in earnest. Throughout the long winter, when the Allies and Russians on the Archangel front were fighting a hard-pressed, defensive battle against superior forces, the Allied command was waiting the arrival of summer to take the offensive. Fearing that political conditions in England would be greatly disturbed if it were to become known that the two brigades of British volunteer troops, sent ostensibly to effect the relief of Allied forces already imperiled and outnumbered, were in reality to be used as a reserve for this summer's offensive, the command did not permit the local announcement to that effect to be cabled abroad. This announcement, made by the Archangel press on June 6, by Major General Ironside, commander-in-chief of the North Russian forces, was to the effect that Archangel was to be made a base for the Siberian army, through an immediate offensive for Kotlass, on the river Dvina. Kotlass is the railhead for the line running to Viatka, on the Trans-Siberian railway, a distance of approximately 250 miles from the position at that time of Kolchak's advanced posts, since then driven back many miles eastward. In this campaign, said General Ironside, the British troops were to act as a reserve while the Russians went ahead. The offensive began late in June, but so far has advanced only a few miles. Kotlass is still more than a hundred miles from the Russian and British positions on the Dvina, which are, in fact, only at about the same point where the Americans were established last autumn before the strong Bolshevik offensive caused them to withdraw during the winter. Although compared with last summer's pitifully small force the present British and Russian command is well equipped, it is still far below the strength of the Bolsheviks in both numbers and artillery. The British gunboats and monitors, of which a large flotilla was sent for operations on the Dvina and Vaga rivers, have for the most part proved useless because of the low water. Even the British volunteer forces have been informed that they will be withdrawn from North Russia before another winter sets in. All Americans and French are now off the Archangel front, and the newly trained Russian troops, most of whom were secured by draft, are limited in number, the territory being sparsely settled. They are, however, well equipped.

At the present time the North Russian government, which has established, under direction of General Kolchak, a "strong policy to hold up the discipline in the army and among the civilian population, is determined to carry on the war against the Bolsheviks to the finish and the people appear anxious to cooperate.

Calvin Twiddy, who has just returned after twenty-eight months' service in the Navy, will leave next week for a trip through the New England and Western States.

MOOSE MEETING WAS LIVELY ONE

New Members, Home Talent Minstrel And Regular Institution of Lodge Among The Topics Discussed

The preliminary meeting of prospective Moose members in the hall of the Flora building Tuesday night was a very lively and interesting one. The lodge has not been regularly instituted as yet and will not be until all the necessary paraphernalia has been received. At the meeting Tuesday night the principal topic of discussion was new members, and when the subject of selecting a membership committee came up there was so much enthusiasm among all members present that it was voted to give every member a special commission to give three hours work to this cause by next Tuesday night when the lodge holds its next meeting. A home talent minstrel was discussed and it is likely that some such event will be decided upon at the next meeting. The Lodge will be instituted, Mr. Faison says, in about two weeks.

GRAYS BLANK SPEEDY CUBS

Clean, Fast Game Goes to The Grays by 4-0 Score; Reid Stars in Box And at Bat; White of Cubs Makes Sensational Catch of Line Drive

The Grays won the third game of the present series yesterday, in what has been described as one of the best-played games ever seen on a local diamond. The big feature of the game was pitcher Reid's work in the box, at the bat and in fielding the various offerings which came his way. In 3 times at bat he got a double, a single, and a base on balls. A double play was pulled off by the Grays in the third inning, after Boyce and Twiddy had singled, Cooper striking out, and Caddy reaching first on Ferrill's error—the only Gray miscue of the game—filling the bases, with one man down, Reid picked up Johnson's fast grounder, shot it to the plate forcing out Boyce, and catcher Woodley caught Johnson at first with a fast throw, completing the double and retiring the side.

A remarkable catch of a low line drive was made by White, center-fielder for the Cubs, robbing Hinton of a hit. Dixon, pitching for the Cubs, permitted 3 hits and a base on balls in the first inning, during which the Grays scored 3 of their 4 runs. Boyce, who relieved Dixon in the second, pitched a good game, allowing but one run during the last 6 innings. The official box score:

KAHLBAUM-WHITEHURST

Attractive Elizabeth City Girl Weds Young Chemist of Missouri

A marriage of much interest in this section was solemnized at the early hour of 5:30 Wednesday morning when Miss Marie Whitehurst became the bride of Mr. William Kahlbaum.

The home on North Road Street was beautifully decorated, the color scheme of white and green being effectively carried out with palms, ferns, cut flowers and white candles. The wedding music was rendered by Miss Bessie Barnes of Wilson. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Maude Whitehurst, who came home from Washington, D. C. to attend the wedding.

Little Marie Spence carried the ring on a silver tray and the bride and groom knelt at the improvised altar while Dr. G. W. Clarke performed the ceremony in a most impressive manner. Only the immediate members of the family and a few intimate friends were present. The bride wore a travelling suit of dust colored vicuna suede, trimmed in gray squirrel, with accessories to match. Her corsage bouquet was of bride's roses and orchids, and her only ornament was a beautiful rope of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Kahlbaum left on the early train for Washington and St. Louis. They will make their home in Rolla, Missouri.

The bride is the very attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whitehurst of this city. She is an alumna of the State Normal College at Greensboro, and for some time was in government work in Washington, D. C.

Numerous and handsome gifts from friends in this city and from a distance attested to her widespread popularity. The groom is just out of Uncle Sam's service and returning to his work as a chemist. He is an alumnus of the University of Missouri.
