Rain Prevents Game Today

Downpour Makes Ground A Mire

And When Torrents Had Fallen For An Hour Game Was Officially Called Off

Polo Grounds, N. Y., Oct. 8 (By The Associated Press)—The fourth world's series game was declared off today on account of rain. The downpour which began at one o'clock still was pouring at two p. m., transforming the playing field into a mire.

Polo Grounds, N. Y., Oct. 8 (By The Associated Press)—It began raining hard at one o'clock today, making prospects of a game dubious. Babe Ruth sat in the grandstand with his arm in a sling.

New York, Oct. 8 (By The Associated Press)—The New York Giants are determined to bombard the Yanks and even up the world series games today. It was this morning believed that the batteries would be Douglas and Snyder for the Giants and Harper or Mays and Schang for the Yankees. Suffering from an abscess on his arm, Babe Ruth was unable to play the fourth game. Cloudy weather early today with official forecast of rain caused officials apprehension.

"We are off now. Watch us from this time on," is Manager McGraw's message to the Giants' supporters.

"We will be right back for another victory," was word Manager Huggins had for Yankee fans.

Doughton Will Attend Legislature As Visitor

Raleigh, Oct. 8.—"I expect to be back here for the special session, but I will probably come as a visitor with the privileges of the floor," declared Governor Rufus A. Doughton while here this week. "I am inclined to think that there are constitutional prohibitions of my sitting as a member of the special session while I am still a member of the State Highway Commission," continued the veteran legislator from Allegheny who for the first time in two decades may not sit in a session of the legislature when it meets in December.

Governor Doughton is still hoping that it will be possible to avoid the special session, or rather he regrets very much that the necessity has arisen which demands a mid-winter session of the legislature this year.

There are differences of opinion on the question, however, and while the attorney general has not been asked to make a ruling on the question there is still the possibility that it will be held that membership of the highway commissioner does not constitute holding public office as contemplated in the constitution when it declared that no one man should hold more than one public office at the same time.

It has been customary for members of the legislature to appoint many from their own number on the board of trustees of the University, State College and other educational and charitable institutions. There has been some protest about this, sometimes from Republicans who did not feel that they had sufficient representation and sometimes from disgruntled Democrats, but the legislature has steadfastly held to its custom of allowing a man to be a member both of the University trustees and hold his place in the legislature.

The highway commissioner gets no more than expenses for the time he is in session. The State allows railroad fare and a limited amount for expenses during the time the commissioner devotes to the road work. Those who believe membership on the highway commission does not disqualify a man for membership in the legislature contend that both are positions that bring no financial reward, and consequently do not come within the constitutional limit.

DISSENSION IN SOCIALIST PARTY

Left Wing Holds That Non-Participation In Italian Government Gives Strategic Position To Avoid Blame

Milan, Oct. 7 (By The Associated Press)—The Italian Socialist party which will meet here October 10 to debate a change of tactics is represented in the Italian Chamber of Deputies by 122 members, the strongest party numerically but is composed of dissenting groups. If the differences of these are not composed, the party's compact representation may be divided into small factions and cliques.

Lining up for the convention are the pro-Soviets, anti-government groups, anti-Russia faction, pro-unity, anti-international centrist tendencies. They are mainly to decide whether the Socialist deputies shall participate on every proposal that it makes.

The right wing under Deputies Turati Treves and Modigliani is for joining in with the Bonomi government and getting what they can in the way of legislation.

The left wing is for holding out until the Socialists in full force can take possession of the government and the "spoils of victory." These are headed by Signor Serrati, director of the Socialist press and Deputy Baratonio.

The right wing is called the "collaborateurs" and the left the "anti-collaborateurs."

The right wing looks upon the present parliamentary situation as one which would yield considerable socialistic legislation. The leaders have been somewhat kindly disposed to President Bonomi, who at one time was a fiery leader in the Socialist ranks but was dropped from the official rolls of the party because of a too patriotic attitude.

That wing is insistent on participation in the government and may of the deputies of that faction are reported to favor deserting the Socialist party in a body if the prevailing sense of the convention goes for "anti-collaboration."

The left wing holds that non-participation in the government puts the Socialists in a strategic position, because if they are not in the government they will not be responsible for any misdeeds blamable to the government. On the other hand, if any credit is due, they are prepared to claim it, they contend, without having born any responsibility.

The Third Internationale asked for the expulsion of the Serrati and Turati from the party. This would mean that more than two thirds of the organization would be outside the pale of the Third Internationale. The remainder, headed by Deputy Baratonio, Deputy Lazzari, and others, would conform to the dictates of the Moscow congress. A party split on these lines seems, however, rather unlikely.

Deputy Lazzari, who was a delegate to Moscow, went there opposing the Lenin and Trotsky dictatorship but returned all for them. Describing the conversation, he said:

"On my way to Moscow, Lazzari was struck by thunderings and lightnings like St. Paul on his way to Damascus and thereafter became a convert of Lenin."

Paris, Sept. 19—Harold Bigby, an English motor engineer, has just crossed the English channel, from Folkstone to Calais on a bicycle fitted on two large floats with a propeller on the fore part of the machine driven by a rod which in turn was operated by the pedals. The rider said that he covered just thirty miles in a little more than 12 hours.

Mr. Bigby was accompanied by a motorist on the trip. Describing his ride he said: "A strong sea was running and a southwest wind blowing but I was much better off than those in the boat for the cycle rode the waves better."

"For three hours I was senseless and I couldn't be fed as the waves prevented the boat from getting close enough to me. Once I was almost washed off my seat and frequently I was covered in water up to the saddle of my machine."
