FRISCO IS GREAT OASIS OF TENTS

City Is Looking Much Like A Magnificent Oriental Capital As The Shrine Jubilee Approaches

San Francisco, June 12 (By The Associated Press)—San Francisco is turning itself into a tented oasis for the delegates and visitors to the Golden Jubilee of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, June 13 to 16.

The ordained procedure of the real Islam to spread rugs for the caliphs and the lesser nobles on state occasions will be reversed somewhat in the transplanted Islam.

Market street, the main thoroughfare, is being turned into a lane closely akin to the picturesque arteries that lead to the old world mosques.

Traversing the "hot sands" that lie between the bay and the civic center the pilgrim will come upon the place of the kneeling camels, and right beyond, the minarets, pavilions and obelisks of an Arabian village.

Wednesday, the second day of the convention, the United States Army will put on an aviation program with confetti and American Beauty roses as the bombing ammunition.

The outstanding events from a purely spectacular point of view will be the parades, three of which have been arranged for.

Hotel accommodations are said to be plentiful, but there is one temple that will take no chances.

Pasquotank Ranking First In The State

Ten Points Ahead Of Next Highest County In Livestock Production In North Carolina

Pasquotank County, with a ratio of 62 per cent, was far in the lead in North Carolina in livestock in 1920, according to statistics compiled on the basis of figures for 1920, and published in the latest issue of the University News Letter.

These seven counties, in widely divergent sections of the State, were well ahead of the average for the entire United States, which was 44 per cent. Forty-nine counties were above the State average of 31 per cent.

Twenty-seven counties are conspicuously below the livestock level of the State, in ratios that range around 75 to 85 per cent below the level of a lightly stocked farm area.

In the final analysis, we run inevitably into the local market food problem—a city problem, and every city's most important business necessity in the days at hand and ahead.

Charles Aycock, brother of Mrs. W. H. Weatherly Jr., of this city and son, C. P. Aycock, of Pantego, was drowned Sunday afternoon at Belhaven when he ventured too far and was caught in the undertow.

Robert Riddick and the drowned man's brother, George Aycock, went to the rescue when they heard the cries for help, but they themselves would have drowned, in all probability, had not a boat gone to their rescue and picked them up in a state of unconsciousness and complete exhaustion.

Unable to offer assistance on account of prevailing surf conditions, hundreds of bathers saw the drowning of young Aycock, who was just 22 years of age, and had but recently returned from the University of North Carolina, where he was a student this year.

Sunday also deserves a second superlative. Besides being the hottest day, it was the most popular one at Dawson's bathing beach, near the Community Hospital.

Explosion Startles Saturday Shoppers

Various Theories Advanced As To Cause, Which Was Unique, To Say The Least

A loud explosion late Saturday afternoon, while the streets were thronged with shoppers, and business on a busy Saturday was at its busiest, startled many people on South Water street, shook to their foundations numerous barrels of oil on the Texas Company dock, on the East Fearing street water front, and played havoc generally with the peace of mind of those who heard it.

Somebody made the startling announcement that a war bomb, planted by some devilish alien during the world conflict, had just exploded. Another believed that murder had been committed, and waited several minutes to hear the victim's dying shriek.

Those who traced the explosion to its source learned that Miles Clark had placed an empty wooden barrel in his gas boat at the Texas Company docks, and had attached it to the exhaust pipe to serve as a muffler.
