The Nation Mourns

The nation mourns today the death of Warren G. Harding and Elizabeth City and The Advance mourn with it.

Out of the day of mourning, let us hope, will come a fuller and more abundant spirit of that peace on earth and good will toward men for which Warren G. Harding always labored—how wisely or how well it is not for a people still bowed in sorrow at his passing to say.

And The Advance hopes that this may be true not only of our national life, but of our community life as well.

If on the morrow the grief which we have felt and shared with a whole nation at the death of our chosen chieftain has not purged our hearts of malice and driven out any bitterness that may have lurked in them, then, so far as we are concerned, Warren Harding will have given his life for his country in vain.

The Advance is probably wrong about it, as it has been in some other matters, but, granting that Maxwell is right about the State's finances, which everybody now except Governor Morrison seems ready to concede, this newspaper can't bring itself to believe that the situation is such as to make a special session of the Legislature either probable or necessary.

Thursday was a good day for digging sweet potatoes, judging by the appearance of the Van-sciver as loaded to capacity she swung into her moorings at the North River Line dock Friday morning.

Elizabeth City and Pasquotank sportsmen are advised to get posted on the provisions of the new hunters' license law, which was published in full in this newspaper yesterday.

Elizabeth City is sometimes a bit slow to realize what the proper thing is, but the old town, once she realizes what is expected of her, rises to the occasion right nobly.

The Advance confesses to a feeling of keen disappointment that Elizabeth City's City Planning Commission, authorized by act of the 1923 Legislature, has not yet been named.

Talk about camps, but as for us and our house, give us the home and farm demonstration camp above all others.
