SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1924.

The bonus may not have taken the count; but it has the appearance of being rather decisively beaten on points, at least.

No matter what the price there is small chance of permanent prosperity in cotton for the farmer who fails to provide for his own needs at least in the way of hog and hominy.

Saturday's paper, once perhaps the least interesting issue of The Advance, has come to be the newsiest. If you can find anywhere a daily newspaper dated Saturday, January 12, with more of interest to you in it than you find in Saturday's Advance, we'd like to hear about it.

Meet Bob Small. When the death of President Harding occurred while David Lawrence was in Europe, Robert T. Small was sent to Washington to cover events there until Mr. Lawrence could return.

The Advance was to receive the dispatches of Mr. Small from Washington in addition to those from David Lawrence during the interval of Mr. Lawrence's absence.

But through some misunderstanding of instructions at the relay station at Richmond, none of the Small dispatches at that time reached The Advance, though this newspaper had announced that they were expected.

Naturally The Advance was disappointed at its failure to receive these dispatches and chagrined that it had failed to make good on an announcement made to its readers in all good faith. Its disappointment and chagrin were made clear to the Consolidated Press Association, which is the organization sending out the Lawrence and Small dispatches, and the association was quick to see this newspaper's viewpoint.

Accordingly, the Small dispatches were started from New York forthwith and came to The Advance regularly for several weeks in way of compensation for the error made during the latter part of Mr. Lawrence's stay in Europe and during the period while he was aboard ship on his way home.

During those weeks The Advance was so favorably impressed by the Small dispatches that it arranged to continue receiving them on a trial basis until January. It has now arranged for their continuation indefinitely and feels that its readers are due formal introduction to Robert T. Small, now of The Advance staff.

ELIZABETH CITY SEVEN YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Daily Advance. January 12. Cann Memorial Presbyterian Church was preparing to install a heating plant. It was not decided whether to use steam or hot air.

At the annual meeting of Culpeper, Griffin, Old and Grace the following directors were elected: W. T. Old, Dr. L. S. Blades, P. H. Williams, H. G. Kramer, G. P. Gilbert, D. B. Bradford, W. G. Gaither, W. N. Old and L. E. Old.

Clarence Parker and Remington Sykes accepted positions with the Bon Ami Company and left for a trip to South Carolina and the Middle West. The D. H. Hill chapter U. D. C. met with Mrs. P. DeLone.

Pasquotank County showed a gainage of 5,691 bales of cotton for the year as compared to 3,639 bales the previous year. Camden County gained 3,790 bales in 1917 and 2,575 bales in 1916.

Harold Foreman was remodeling his home recently purchased on Main street. Eddie Hughes was also remodeling his Main street home and preparing to move in.

duction to Robert T. Small, now of The Advance staff. Bob Small, then, is a reporter and newswriter of international reputation. Readers of The Advance must have noticed that his are the stories in the news of the day that editorial writers all over the country are commenting on.

His headquarters are New York City, but the Consolidated Press Association gives him a roving commission and he is free always to go wherever big or unusual events are happening. Mr. Small knows New York, but he also knows most of the country and of the world as well.

He has been on intimate terms with American Presidents, from McKinley to Harding, but he has known just as intimately notorious gunmen of New York City or of the Far West. While a reporter for The Associated Press he was described by Melville Stone, head of that great newsgathering agency, as among the four or five best newspaper writers in the country.

Bob Small met Pershing when the commander of the American forces first set foot in France and was issued Press License No. 1 in the A. E. F. While war correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, he sent the first dispatch to reach America carrying the news that there was to be at last one supreme command on the allied fronts before Paris.

Bob Small, David Lawrence, Frank Simonds and Roger Babson are each at the top in his particular line. They make a quartet that the biggest newspaper in the country would be proud to have on its staff.
