

PASQUOTANK HAS MODEL STOCK FARM

HAS BEGUN NOW TO RAISE SHEEP

Cattle and Hogs Have for Some Time Been Raised on Scientific Basis and Big Scale by J. W. Foreman.

An example of what can be accomplished in this section in stock raising may be found at the Foreman Stock Farm. On this farm 200 head of cattle, 200 head of hogs and about 70 head of sheep as well as the mules which work the crops are supported almost entirely on home-grown crops.

Two silos, each with a capacity of 250 tons and among the few silos in this section, serve green feed all winter. Corn fodder is used for ensilage almost entirely, but stock peas hay is sometimes mixed with the corn.

In addition to the ensilage the cattle are fed cotton seed meal at the rate of about two pounds to the head.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the farm is the permanent pasture. The Foreman Stock Farm has the largest permanent pasture in this County and without a doubt on this side of the sound. The acreage is approximately 250 acres. It has been planted five years and is due for rotation on the five-year rotation plan. The seed planted are carpet grass, Lespedeza, Alsac or white clover, and some other grasses in minor quantities.

Pigs are grazed on the permanent pasture and later are put on corn, middlings and meat meal. A shipment was recently made of six months old pigs, many of which weighed 125 pounds.

Unlike many growers of hogs in the Southern states, the Foreman Stock Farm produces strictly hard hogs. This result is obtained, according to C. E. Pritchard who operates the farm under the management of J. W. Foreman, by feeding corn while the pigs are on soy beans. They are allowed to eat all the corn they will take and are not fed soy beans in great quantities.

Discretion is used also in the marketing of the pigs each year. If the market is good they are held and fed a rushing diet. If it is not satisfactory they are sold. From 100 to 200 are marketed each year. The farm now had 200 head of which there are about 45 sows.

The growing of sheep is a new venture with the farm, as this was just started last year, with about 47 head. Sheep are fed ensilage, alfalfa hay, and young oats and vetch. Last year a number were sheared and the wool marketed.

This year the farm will probably not produce much vetch, if any, as it is hard to harvest.

Those who have any doubts as to the possibilities of stock raising in this County should make a visit to the Foreman farm, where the well kept fields and pastures and the sleek, fat cattle, hogs and sheep will soon dispel any idea that the Albemarle is not adapted most favorably to stock growing if the proper methods are pursued.

LOSS POTATOES IS EXAGGERATED

Rain and Snow Have Undoubtedly Caused Some Losses but Cooler Heads Believe Damage Not Serious

Cooler heads are convinced that the complaint of some growers of heavy losses through rotting of potato seed is unwarranted and exaggerated. There has undoubtedly been some loss to growers in Pasquotank and the neighboring counties on account of the excessive rain and snow of the past few weeks but the cold weather has prevented heavier losses.

"I have heard right much complaint of rotting seed potatoes," W. D. Glover said Friday afternoon. "I hear the same complaint every year though, and do not believe the losses are very great. It is natural for some people to think they are hit harder 'han they actually are."

The sweet potato seed in beds in Currituck County has been damaged to some extent, according to N. T. Aydielt, who is in touch with the situation there. He has been advised that a number of growers are planning to renew their beds as they think their original venture was a failure.

In the vicinity of Columbia there has been more loss than in this immediate vicinity. Seed potatoes are planted earlier there and the percentage of loss has been greater.

N. Howard Smith says from the reports he has received he judges that one-third of the seed planted has been ruined. There is a strong demand for seed potatoes from the Columbia section, according to Mr. Smith.

"There is no cause for alarm in this section unless there should come a hot sultry period," Mr. Smith said. "About 75 per cent of the acreage has been planted but the percentage of loss through rot has so far been small, in my opinion."

Potatoes planted on high land are believed to be safe while those planted in low, boggy spots are expected to suffer the most from the wet weather.

Truck Peas and Potatoes

WE offer to every grower of Peas and Potatoes in our territory the services of a marketing organization with wide connections that insures to the grower the quick distribution of his shipments to the best markets of the country.

Hundreds of farmers have made use of our organization which has been perfected after many years' experience in the produce deal, and these farmers now are regular patrons because we have saved them money and secured them better prices.

Your shipments of Peas and Potatoes are handled in the largest potato warehouse in Eastern North Carolina, with more railroad track and wagon room than any other house. This insures quick unloading and rapid handling of your shipments.

The use of our organization will cost you no more than the most haphazard method you might employ in marketing your crop, so we urge you to see us at your first opportunity. Make use of our service freely, and call on us for any information you may need.
