Out in Society

Entertained at Dinner
 The Tuesday night rook club was beautifully entertained at dinner and cards by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Blades at their home, 607 Pennsylvania Avenue. As the guests arrived they were assigned their places and served a delicious three course dinner. Dainty little hand painted fans were given to the ladies, and boxes in the shape of peanuts filled with candy were given the men. The home was lovely with quantities of spring flowers, hyacinths, carnations, jonquils and peach blossoms being used in beautiful and riotous profusion. At the end of the game, during which punch was served, pretty corsage bouquets were given the ladies and buttoniers to the men. Those enjoying the lovely party with Mr. and Mrs. Blades were Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Fearing, Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Foreman, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Woodley, Mrs. James Hackney, Mrs. Elias Carr, Miss Annie Terrell Ferebee, and M. Leigh Sheep.

In Honor of Birthday
 Mrs. W. J. Woodley Jr., was hostess Monday night at her home, 403 East Church street, when she entertained at rook in honor of Mr. Woodley's birthday. The home was artistically decorated with golden jonquils and at the end of the game a hot salad course with tea and nuts was served. Those enjoying the anniversary with Mr. and Mrs. Woodley were: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Woodley, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Foreman, and Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Bennett.

The use of the wide cape on this thin summer frock is novel indeed, and charming, too, as you can easily see. Embroidery in pink is combined with flit lace to trim this lingerie frock which is of the finest white batiste.

Fashion News Notes

Paris, April 2.—The straight tight lines of one type of gown shown here are relieved oddly enough by slim folds of the material running horizontally around the waist from just above the normal waist line to the hips. This effect looks almost too much like wrinkles—but it is at any rate an alleviation.

Paris, April 2.—It is well nigh impossible today to get heels too high or too slim for one designer's fancy. Though the trend is toward somewhat sturdier heels, this show designer insists that women prefer the very high heel for dress occasions.

London, April 2.—As the gown grows shorter, there is a tendency to have the skirt "hike up" a few inches in front. Needless to say, on all but the slim and lovely, this is a dreadful idea.

London, April 2.—It is difficult to distinguish today the wrap around dress from the wrap-around coat. In fact, they are at times interchangeable, as in the case of a very fine gray will fastening only on one hip, which may be worn as frock or top coat.
