National League of Women Voters Preaching and Teaching Democracy in Practical Terms That Tend to Educate to Intelligent Use of Ballot

Buffalo, N. Y., April 29.—The strongest convention of the year of 1924 is being held here. Alongside of it the Republican National Convention at Cleveland and the Democratic Convention at New York would afford a remarkable contrast.

For here are gathered delegates who are interested in principles and not parties. In the two major conventions will be assembled delegates interested in men and political parties.

There's no partisanship in the National League of Women Voters. Nor is there any attempt to pass judgment on existing controversies in Congress. But the background of these controversies, the principles which are fundamental in them, are being studied here. And the whole convention may be described as a university extension course. It is by far the most intelligent effort that has yet been made in America to preach Democracy in practical terms and educate the voter to the use of the ballot.

The object of the League of Women Voters this year is to urge 75 per cent of the eligible women voters of the nation to go to the polls. The league itself will not tell them how to vote, what party or candidates to endorse. But any one who attends the meetings of the various state and city leagues or reads the bulletins and publications issued by them has been educated sufficiently to render an individual judgment.

The league's sole aim is good government—intelligent and efficient administration. What some men's organization has taken generations to accomplish in the way of advancing certain progressive movements, the League of Women Voters has in four years achieved. Reports from the state and county organizations show that the natural inquisitiveness of women has resulted in regular interrogatories to candidates so that the voter can determine what those who seek public office really stand for.

The searchlight of scrutiny has been turned on individual records. The awakening of the women of the nation to their power in the use of the ballots is proceeding with remarkable success. Each year shows an increased number of active workers in local communities.

The national convention, which has been in session for several days has gone along harmoniously because in no instance has it invaded the domain of political parties. The league, however, has not confined itself entirely to abstract principles for it has gone on record unequivocally in favor of the entry of the United States in the permanent court of the league of justice, according to the Harding-Hughes proposals which recently received the endorsement of President Coolidge.

Resolutions also have been formulated in support of such action as would permit the United States Government to send representatives "to act on international economic committees and international conferences." Also the league favors measures of disarmament by international agreement, particularly with reference to "naval, military, aviation, gas and chemical warfare."

Not the least important of the recommendations incidentally is one that has only recently been agitated, but which is of paramount importance in an era of open diplomacy; namely, "measures to secure prompt publication of State Department reports."

Apart from the foregoing recommendations for legislation, the League of Women Voters has reserved for study the problem of reparations, the Monroe Doctrine, and Europe generally. Among the topics is one relating to a Constitutional amendment whereby treaties may be ratified by majority instead of two-thirds vote. After numerous round table discussions, reports will be made on these questions.

Apart from current events, the whole organization here has begun an intensive work of education in governmental affairs, citizenship, social hygiene, child welfare and efficiency in government with concrete recommendations for legislation in each. Indeed, attending the convention here, where there is absence of personal and party ambition, is a breath of fresh air in a season of congressional smoke.

Giving up the tobacco business, General Carr interested himself in banking, organizing the First National Bank of Durham, of which he was president at the time of his death. Besides being president of the Durham and Charlotte Railway, Continued on Page 4

GENERAL CARR DIES IN CHICAGO

Death of Durham's Leading Citizen and North Carolina's Much Loved Son Occurs While on Visit.

Chicago, April 30.—General Julian S. Carr of Durham, North Carolina, died Tuesday while on a visit to his daughter here. He had contracted pneumonia last Saturday. The body will be taken back to Durham for burial.

Raleigh, April 30.—Governor Morrison declared here today that General Carr's death is a great loss to the State to which he had rendered valuable service and in which he was dearly loved.

Durham, April 30.—The city is prostrated with grief at the news of the death of its leading citizen who had given to all open handedly and had taken an active part in every movement of the community.

General Julian Shakespeare Carr, soldier, manufacturer, banker, philanthropist, and one of the most conspicuous figures in the public life of North Carolina, was born on October 12, 1845, at Chapel Hill, a son of John Wesley and Elizabeth Pannill Carr. His earliest American ancestor was John Carr, who was born in County Down, Ireland, in 1728, and settled in Virginia in Colonial times. During the American revolution this ancestor served as an ensign in the First Virginia Regiment. A still earlier generation of the family contained Robert Carr, Earl of Somerset, for whom General Carr's handsome residence at Durham, "Somerset Villa," was named.

General Carr's father was a merchant, operating a small store at Chapel Hill, and it was in this store that General Carr received his early business training. He attended the village schools and entered the University of North Carolina when he was only 16 years of age. The war between the States was then going on and before completing his course at the University, young Carr volunteered in the Confederate army as a private in Company K, Third North Carolina Regiment, in Barringer's Brigade, Hampton's Corps, Army of Northern Virginia. He made a splendid record as a soldier and when the war ended he returned to Chapel Hill and entered business with his father. In 1869 he went to Arkansas to engage in business, but returned to his home State a year later.

Shortly after his return from Arkansas, General Carr purchased for $4,000 a third interest in a tobacco partnership which W. T. Blackwell and J. R. Day were conducting at Durham. The company manufacturing a smoking tobacco which is today sold in every civilized country in the world. General Carr had charge of the financial management of the business and it is said that it was due to his skilful handling of this department that the business was enabled to grow to the proportions it has. After the partnership had existed for a number of years, General Carr bought the holdings of his associates and for many years operated the company very successfully.

Chiropractic—For Diabetes

QUESTION—"Will you please tell me if you can do anything for diabetes? I am a sufferer and have been unable to find relief."

ANSWER—For years Medical Science has sought to discover what vital organ was primarily responsible for the long train of disagreeable and dangerous symptoms known as "Diabetes." For a long time the liver and kidneys were blamed, but most recent investigations show that the pancreas is the organ at fault. Since the normal functioning of any organ depends on the proper amount of Vital Energy reaching that organ, the competent Chiropractor is not handicapped for a remedy in this so-called grave disease. We know the proper Adjustment in the spine will restore the essential life energy to the organ involved, whether it be the pancreas, the liver or the kidneys. A Spinal Analysis always reveals the organ at fault, therefore, the answer to your question is YES.

8760 Hours of Service Each Year

For Only $2.00

Did you ever figure your watch cost by the year as you would a suit of clothes?

You pay more than $40 for a suit of clothes, and it gives you some fifteen hours of service each day for about a year. A year of shoe service costs you at least half of that.

But this watch will give you 8760 hours of service each year for only $2.00.

An investment of $40 now covers twenty years or so of faithful timekeeping service. When you consider how absolutely essential this service is, doesn't the cost $2.00 a year seem ridiculously low?

No matter what you intend to pay, figure your cost by the year. We have an unusually fine assortment of high grade watches at various prices, from which you may choose the one that best suits your taste and purse.
