What's become o' th' ole fashioned girl that used t' bust in th' door all out o' breath and complain that she'd been foller'd? Mrs. Tipton Bud has a postal card from her sister sayin' they're all well, 'cept th' fern is turnin' yell'er.

Not a County Office

There is nobody outside of Elizabeth City in all the Albemarle for whom The Advance entertains a friendlier regard than for J. H. McMullan of Edenton. Personally we know him better by far and from a standpoint of personal friendship would vote for him rather than for T. W. Costen of Gates County.

But The Advance weighs other considerations than that of personal friendship in deciding what candidates it will or will not support and holds itself in effect committed to the candidacy of T. W. Costen. It is not bound in this matter by any formal pledge but when Mr. Costen announced that he would stand for re-election The Advance ventured the hope that he would be given the nomination without opposition.

Subsequent to that, had The Advance found that Mr. Costen, on such a matter as the bridge across the lower Chowan river, had suffered himself to be made the partisan of parrow sectional interests, we would have felt that this newspaper could justly withdraw its support from him. We did not feel, however, that we would be giving him a square deal to withdraw that support before giving him an opportunity to express himself on this issue and had just written him for a statement of his position when we received the lengthy communication setting that position forth and published as advertising in Thursday's issue of this newspaper.

In this communication it appears that Mr. Costen not only pledges himself against opposition to the bridge but goes so far as to say that he is heartily in favor of it and, if re-elected to the Senate, will do all that he can for the project. Indeed Mr. Costen's attitude toward his office, as expressed in his communication, is so much in line with the ideals of this newspaper that we would be strongly inclined to support him were he now offering himself for his first term. Inasmuch as he is offering himself for re-election following one term in which he served the voters acceptably, we do not see how this newspaper, after deploring that fact that our representatives in Senate and House had heretofore as a rule served but one term in the General Assembly and therefore had never gained the prestige and prominence in that body as have those who have represented their county or district for years, and after expressing the hope that no other candidates would offer themselves this year for the Senate in this district, can do other than support him. In fact, we can hardly see how the district can in justice to him do less than re-elect him. It is a matter of general party policy, we believe, to elect to a second term any official who proves himself faithful and capable in office for his first term and then offers himself as a candidate for re-election.

The district, we take it, does not wish to say that Mr. Costen, in the last session of the General Assembly, failed to measure up to the duties and responsibilities of his office.

In all friendliness to Mr. McMullan, then, The Advance cannot not escape the conclusion that it would have been well for him to give Mr. Costen a chance to express his position on the Chowan bridge before entering the lists as a candidate himself. Mr. McMullan has, of course, every right to run for the Senate if he wants to, but Chowan County can't elect a Senator for this district all by itself.

Four new unsolicited memberships in the Chamber of Commerce sent in to Chamber of Commerce headquarters in the Community Building are reported by Secretary R. C. Job within the last few days. This sort of thing is heartening indeed.

Whether after hearing Josiah William Bailey you vote for him or not, you won't regret going out to the courthouse for the speaking tonight.

COOLIDGE SEEKS UNITY ON PROBLEMS

Washington, May 8.—The general legislative situation in the Senate particularly with reference to the tax and farm relief bills were again considered at a round the breakfast table conference at the White House today.

The discussion was described as general with Coolidge endeavoring to obtain some unity of views on major legislative problems remaining before the Senate.
