Hats Large Or Small But Must Not Be Middle Sized

Parisian Milliners Declare That the Medium Hat Is as Non-Existent in the Eyes of Fashion at Present as the Rich Climber Through the Lorgnette

By ALLEN LAMONT
(By The Associated Press)

New York, May 13—Buy a large hat or buy a small hat, but shun the medium sized hat. Parisian milliners are informing their clients that the medium hat is as non-existent in the eyes of fashion at present as a new rich climber through the lorgnette of Southampton social leader, outside a charity board meeting.

The size of the hats, according to the French designers, has a tendency to become larger for smart wear, although they admit the small shape continues to be worn. Horse hair is the favorite medium of expression for large floppy types, while pique straw is the most popular for the small hats. The cloche, the milliners continue, has past its peak of popularity, and the newer hats are turned up at the front or side.

Large or small however, the prices of these Paris head coverings is alike—high—as many a helpless husband on trip abroad has found to his dismay. "Petit chapeau, releve de tres—1200 fr" was an item on a statement one gentleman from Texas recently found awaiting him at his hotel. The "small hat three quarters turned up" at that moment decorated the head of Mrs. Texas.

"Shades of the Alamo," shouted the lone star traveler, "here is where I make my last stand. That hat ain't a three pint hat let alone three quarts and my four gallon Stetson only cost $30."

Although the small hats have added nothing in size, they have taken on additional decoration. This is most frequently accomplished by use of feathers. One small hat turned up at the side seen today was garnished by sprigs of velleure feathers in five different colors. Still another was trimmed with two little gray birds, one with a red head and one with a blue.

One of the most charming of the larger shapes is a fine white panama with the side brim turned sharply up in front and trimmed with red ostrich plumes curled so closely in a tight spiral around the crown that each plume looked like a rosette. Still another model has all one side covered by a fan of ostrich feathers fastened above the turned down brim with an ornament of shell.

One of the latest novelties in a small hat of felt is graduated shades running from orange to chestnut. This hat has no additional trimming. The shades of most of the new head coverings seem to have been inspired in part by the cargo of a United Fruit Steamer. At least the colorings include nearly every shade of green, yellow and orange with "banana", a light yellow tint, the favorite. Cyclamen, red and purple also are popular. "Burnt bread" is a new shade, especially appropriate for recent spring brides.

Leather hats are by no means overlooked and the latest of these match the flat underarm bags carried by the wearers.

First, We as the Mens Bible Class of the First Baptist Sunday School, Elizabeth City, N. C., bow our heads in humble submission to His will in confident trust that our loss is his gain.

Second, Believing his life to be worthy of emulation as a man of God we commend all his good traits to the living.

Third, We extend to the Bereaved Wife, Daughter and Brother—our heartfelt sympathies in this hour of their bereavement.

PAINTED EARS VERY LATEST

But the Earstick Is Not Shell Pink, but Any Color Please Madame's Fancy

Paris, May 13—What next? Whatever is next, it cannot be more startling than what is at present. For now we have painted ears. They are painted, at the tips, blue or green or any color you fancy, to match or contrast with the gown.

New York, May 13—Even shoe buckles are painted now. A very natty dress pump of black satin shown today has its front elastic going concealed beneath a "buckle" of painted black satin and steel heading.

New York, May 13—Taffeta and crepe de chine negligees are beautified this season by long panels of ecru lace, in tiny ruffles. These form a thick, soft hand around the sleeves, while the small pockets are entirely made of them.

New York, May 13—Its going to be a gaudy beach this summer. There is, for example, the bathing suit of silk in Roman stripes, not to mention the bathing suit of foulard and that of taffeta.

New York, May 13—The cloche remains so much in vogue today that at a recent fashionable wedding the bridesmaids wore the cloche instead of the customary wide brimmed picture-hat. In this instance the cloche was of organdie in many ruffles, the color being dawn pink and each cloche was provided with wide, long ribbons of orchid.

New York, May 13—The slave-chain bracelet has been translated into a garter. This is a beautiful, jeweled thing of aqua-marines and silver on a base of white silk elastic.
