ABE MARTIN

It's all right 't' be a Republican part o' th' time, or a Democrat some o' th' time, but we all ought 't' vote fer th' best man any ole time.

Count the Votes

Well, folks, it's all over but the shouting and The Advance and, we suspect, Advance readers, breathe a sigh of vast relief.

The votes will tell the story, and The Advance is entirely willing to let them do the talking.

A primary campaign is hard to live through at best. This has been far from the least unendurable one we ever experienced.

Where language has been left somewhat to our discretion, as in the news columns, we have endeavored to tone down rather than to magnify the exchanges of recrimination between parties in a dispute.

and have striven where our advice was asked, to counsel against harsh epithets even in the matter of paid advertisements.

Where we has espoused the cause of a candidate we have done it openly, and where, as between contestants, we did not feel that the issues involved were sufficiently grave to call for a stand for one or another on the part of this newspaper, we have tried not to let our personal preferences crop out in our news columns, certainly not to the extent of doing any candidate an injustice.

On the other hand, we have not hesitated to declare our whole mind where the trend of events has seemed to call upon us to take a stand.

And now that all is over, practically, except counting the votes, we will say that we don't believe a single candidate stands a ghost of a show in the primary election of whom would amount to a calamity from a standpoint of the general welfare, whatever elements of personal disappointment or tragedy anybody's defeat might involve.

Having met the issues of the primary according to the dictates of its own conscience, and having spoken its mind sincerely and without malice, and as wisely and as kindly as it knew how, The Advance awaits the outcome with equanimity.

Things sometimes really happen as it seems they should. And when they don't, eventually all things are found to have worked together for the common good.

Silent Cal Really Happy Tinkering With His Radio

Here's Companion That One Can Just Listen to Without Having to Uncork Even an Occasional Uh-huh to Encourage It and Key It Going

Washington, June 7. — "Silent Cal" Coolidge has found a friend that he can just listen to, and to whom he does not have to give even an occasional nod or "uh-huh" to indicate that he is following.

point he can pick up. He has "had" most of the United States, including far-away Texas. But, owing to his love for systematic progress and a desire to "begin little and end big," the President is said not yet to have taken any other trips overseas.

Every evening, when he has put aside the cares and duties of his exalted office, the President sinks into a cushioned easy chair, dreamily closes his eyes, and just listens — while other people talk about the problems he has had to face that day, or refreshes his mind with poetry, music and jests.
