

Evangelist Begins Appeal To The Unconverted Man

After Devoting Several Weeks to Strengthening Faith of Christians and Relieving Their Minds of Errors, Mr. Ham Turns to the Unsaved

The usual well-filled tabernacle greeted Evangelist M. F. Ham again last night when he spoke on "Why Men Go to Hell."

This sermon was in distinct contrast to the line of messages which the evangelist has been delivering from time to time and was directed more to the out and out sinner than to the professing Christians.

Throughout practically the entire campaign thus far, Mr. Ham has been preaching to the professing Christians at both the morning and evening services, instructing them in the great spiritual truths of the Bible, building up their faith, relieving their minds of misconceptions, and delusions of all kinds and the unconverted man up to date had come in for only casual consideration.

It is evident now that the evangelist means to swing into a line of gospel messages, preaching directly to the unsaved.

The sermon last night was a powerful discussion of the exact given by men for not accepting Christ and the evangelist was at his best from the time he came to the platform until the close of his urgent appeal to the unsaved.

The inquiry room was filled with seekers after instruction in the way of salvation as a result of his appeal.

The song service last night was one of the best of the entire campaign and Charister Ramsay highly commended the choir for their good work. He took occasion to express the appreciation of the party and the local committee to the Stief Piano Company of Norfolk for the use of the large concert grand piano which they furnished for the campaign.

L. P. Gore, manager of the Stief Company, with his wife and daughter, were guests of the party on the platform. A delegation from Raleigh was also present and the opening prayer was offered by H. P. Brother of Raleigh.

The board of stewards of the First Methodist Church attended the service last night in a body and received special recognition from the platform.

This morning Mr. Ham delivered a special sermon on the subject "What the Bible Requires of Us Concerning the Treatment of Our Enemies." Tonight he will speak on "Pontius Pilate."

The scriptural text of the sermon of Mr. Ham last night was John 8:40, "And ye will not come to me that ye might have life." The minister pointed out in clear terms just what such wanton negligence meant to Christ and how the Saviour regarded such actions. "For the facts are as Jesus stated that at various times that a large majority of the people that have lived are going to eternal damnation rather than to eternal salvation. It is terrible to think that so many of the people in this very audience will never reap the reward of a Christ-filled life, and that even before tomorrow dawns, they may be in hell looking up toward Heaven and crying for a drop of water to cool their parched tongue."

"God did not make Hell for man. He made it for the Devil and his angels. Men go there as imposters and trespassers, in regions in which they do not belong. If Hell was not made for man why do men go there? It is certainly not because there is not salvation for them because Christ, and man will not find himself in Hell because of Adam's sin. It is true that because Adam sinned, all men are capable of sin, but those who go to hell will not go there because they themselves have sinned since they came to this earth. Sin has prevailed on the earth for a long time, and it is called a transgression. Death has prevailed too, and is evidence of sin itself. Jesus Christ paid the death penalty that made man possible to salvation and salvation possible to man. You may wonder why it is then that God saves a child that is not of accountable age. This is simply the child has never sinned within itself and the Lord forgives it of Adam's sin."

"There is no doubt in the fact that man's own sin is responsible for his own destruction. Man is not to be held responsible for heritage or parentage, for there are some cases in which the parents of men have to a large extent influenced the lives of their children spiritually. And at the same time the line of the parents are not to prevent any man from being saved although it is true the sin of the parents will be visited upon the children even unto the third or the fourth generation."

"And it is not sins that send men to Hell. It is the refusal of men to repent of these sins. Heaven is full of men who have sinned but these same sinners have been regenerated and have gotten right with the Lord. At the same time men cannot give an excuse for getting into Hell that there were so many hypocrites in the world, for often it is the case that these men are so critical that they have developed the inability to see any men other than in the light of a hypocrite. Their vision is impaired."

As per previous announcement, the evangelist this morning took up a discussion of "Our Duties to Our Enemies," and spoke in substance as follows:

"The man who goes to a doctor or a lawyer for advice expects to be followed. God reveals his will only to those who are willing to do it. If any man wills to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine. Now, God's word is very plain and explicit concerning our duty to our enemies, both in and out of the church."

"In Matthew xviii, 15-35, we are told to take a grievance first of all to the offender himself. Tell him; not somebody else. Discussion can only intensify antagonism. The more you will become embittered and harder it will be to adjust the matter. The man who talks embitters his own heart. So we are to go to one, and as you go, pray God to give you grace and the spirit of love to win your brother."

"Ninety-nine of every hundred difficulties and misunderstandings could be settled in a few minutes if this rule were followed. But if he will not listen to you, take others with you, and if he is still irreconcilable take the matter to the church."

"If a man will not hear the church he has no business in the church. Let him be no longer a brother, but a publican. The man who loves peace will avoid discussion as far as possible. Expression deepens impression. That is why Christians should often testify for Christ and also why they should avoid factional talk. But if a faction maker persists, do not hesitate to discipline him."

"In Matthew xviii, 21, the Saviour lays down the law of forgiveness on your part. Verse 15 related to your brother's duty to you; now he tells what is your duty toward him. He says you must forgive him seven times, as seven is the number of completion. You say you can't do that. Then you had better seek for more grace than you have; for Jesus says in that case 'Neither will your Heavenly Father forgive you your trespasses.'" (Mark xi, 24-26.)

"Well, some say, 'I can forgive him, but I don't propose to have anything more to do with him.' Then, according to the principle, when you get to the gates of Heaven, St. Peter will say to you, 'God has forgiven you, but he doesn't propose to have anything more to do with you.' But the truth is, brother, you can never get to Heaven with malice in your heart. If you have gotten the worst of the matter and suffer wrongfully get your comfort in 1 Peter ii, 19-24."

"Do you mean to tell me I must forgive the enemy who has killed me? That is what Christ says. 'And the second who has slandered me?' That is what he says. If you are filled by his spirit, you will do so. Amidst the agony of the cross he prayed for those who had so cruelly mocked, ridiculed, spat upon, beaten him and crucified him. 'Father, forgive them; they know not what they do.'"

"Read afresh the parable of the unjust steward, and note especially he says, 'If ye from your hearts receive not,' etc., neither shall you obtain forgiveness. You often pray, 'Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.' If you would not have only partial forgiveness grant entire forgiveness yourself."

"The favors granted you may be in answer to the prayers of others and for their sake. Lot's delivery from Sodom was not in answer to his prayers for his own sake, but for Abraham's sake."

"Thus far the discussion has been as to your proper course when you are the aggrieved party. In Matthew v, 23-24, the great Teacher instructs us as to our duty when we have given offense to our brother. He says you can't worship until you have sought out your offended brother and straightened the matter up with him, for your gift will not be acceptable until you have done this. And you can't get joy out of worship unless the spirit of God be with you, and that is why worship so often becomes a burden

PORT TERMINALS SEEM DEFEATED

Raleigh, Nov. 6.—The result for Port Terminals this morning stood as follows, with 653 precincts reports out of the total of 1,730:

For Ports 68,958; Against 74,894.

In spite of this majority against the measure, General Albert Cox declared that returns received by Port Terminals headquarters indicated that the proposal had been adopted by a good majority.

"The greatest blessings I have seen come upon towns and upon churches have been when old contentions were antagonisms have been settled in the Christian spirit and old enemies have become reconciled."

"You can't fool God by any sort of dissimulation and false pretense. He knows your heart, and you have got to have the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. And don't think any matter of difference is too small to grieve him. No sin looks small to God. To him sin is always exceedingly sinful."

A woman at Fort Scott, Kansas, told me once that she had been praying for years that her husband might be saved, and it seemed God would not hear her. I told her then there was something wrong in her own life. She studied a minute and said, 'Do you think this can be it?' without waiting for her to finish, I said, 'Yes, I don't know what you are going to say, but whatever it is, be sure that is the trouble; for the Holy Spirit will always suggest it to you.'

"Then she told me there was ill feeling between her and a neighbor. She went over and asked forgiveness, and they mutually forgave each other and had a prayer. That day her husband came home to dinner and fell weeping on her shoulder and gave his heart to God, and came to the tabernacle that night and made his confession."

"As to our enemies, in Matthew v, 43-44, our Saviour tells us that our duty is to love them and do good to them; this has been a hard saying to many good people, because quarrelling, Jacob construed it. It does not mean that you shall love your enemies as you love your mother or your child or your wife; but as you love yourself."

"How do you love yourself? Why, when you are hungry, you feed yourself; when you are in distress, you relieve yourself. If you can; you don't circulate mean reports or say mean things about yourself, pray for him, just as you pray for yourself. Praying is better than quarrelling. Jacob had to wrestle all night in prayer before he could be reconciled to Esau. Speak no evil, says Titus, iii: 2."

"It may in extreme cases become necessary and proper to speak evil of a bad man in order to give warning to a possible victim; but never for the sake of evil itself. And remember that there are three things that cannot even be joked about—the virtue of a woman, the character of a preacher and the credit of a bank."

"When you pray for your enemies, don't just perfunctorily pray, 'Lord, bless my enemies.' That is too general and indefinite. Pray for each one by name. You can't do that long till you will begin to love every one of them."

"In my meeting at Garland, Texas, a man who had been talking against the meeting drew from me some rebukes so severe that he came to the tabernacle and told me he had come to lick me and was going to make me fight him or whip me. I asked permission to pray over the matter as I told him I never undertook anything without consulting the Lord about it. He told me to go ahead, but to hurry up. I prayed earnestly for him, and when I opened my eyes he was in tears, came forward and surrendered his life to Christ and became my fast friend, just as ready to fight for me as he had been to fight against me."

"The reason we haven't a thousand conversions here in God's spirit is grieved. What we have against each other is trivial in comparison with what he has against us. Why the old martyrs not only forgave the men who put them to death, but prayed for them as the flames rose around them."

"I have heard people say they could forgive a person who had wronged them if they thought him worthy. Suppose God was to apply that rule to us? Which of us could be forgiven? God doesn't forgive you for your sake; but for Christ's sake, and that must be your motive. And Christ is worthy in every case."

"And don't confuse suffering for Christ's sake with suffering for your own inconsistency. In that case you are not persecuted, but justly criticized."

"And after you have buried a thing don't dig it up again; let it stay buried. Drop it for good."

"Follow God's way, and my word for it and his word for it he will bless you."

Women Take Another Step Toward The White House

However, They Failed in Tuesday's Elections to Strengthen Their Line Materially in the Move to Build a Feminist Bloc in United States Congress

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Women took one step more toward the White House at this election, but failed to strengthen their line materially in the move to build a feminist bloc in Congress. The advance was in a new quarter, toward executive responsibility in politics, while the fight for legislative representation marked time.

Out of the present melee have come Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, ruler of Texas, and Governor Nellie T. Ross, chief executive of Wyoming, the nation's first feminine political potentates. In the executive chair of the commonwealth, they are to govern, these women will be just one jump from the presidency—as heads of states next in executive responsibility to the chief magistrate of the nation.

If they measure up to the demands of their task and solidify their advance so that others of their sex may step up with them in elections to come the road to the presidency will be smoothed out considerably for women. The fact the first feminine executives rode into office on the shoulders of their husbands, takes away none of the glory for them in the achievement.

But in the battle for legislative honors the feminists barely held their own. Her duty will be to the prettier sex went down in defeat, while none was able to break into the upper house of the Congress which has remained uninvaded to the present.

Mrs. Mary T. Norton, of Jersey City, N. J., upheld the feminine honors, by breaking into the House of Representatives as the first woman elected East of the Mississippi. She bears another distinction as a woman "wet" vice chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Her duty will be to carry on the battle for recognition of women that Mrs. Mae Nolan, only woman representative in the present Congress managed. Mrs. Nolan was not a candidate for reelection.

Whether Mrs. Norton is to have assistance at her task is doubtful, according to Democratic and Republican headquarters here, who announce that they are without information that other feminine candidates for national legislative office, have succeeded.

In most states, however, women have strengthened their legislative positions, bulwarking their stand for future advances in the legislative section.

It is as chief executives of states that the feminine politicians are to shine. "Ma" Ferguson, future ruler of the great Lone Star state, is going to devote her main attention to education, from the rural schools to the university. She announces now that victory is assured, that it is her intention to be a "real" governor. She will attempt to vindicate her husband, James E. Ferguson, whose record as governor brought about his impeachment a few years ago.

Mrs. Ross, probable winner of the governorship of Wyoming, says that she will conduct the executive office in a way that will allow "no one ever again to assert that women are unfit for high executive office." She will, as so to conduct state affairs as the example of her rule will make it easy for women elsewhere to achieve leadership as chief magistrates of states.

With these two women strengthening the advance of their sex toward the highest political office

VICTORY GROWS FOR COOLIDGE

Latest Returns Boost His Total of Votes and Increase His Strength in Congress.

New York, Nov. 6.—Republican triumphs in Tuesday's election today assumed even greater magnitude as the counting of ballots neared completion.

Latest returns not only boosted the total of electoral votes credited to President Coolidge and Mr. Dawes but increased the likelihood that the new administration will have a dependable majority of its own party in Congress.

They likewise lifted to new heights the vast Republican majorities in several states already counted in the electoral column and gave indications of depositing there all of the electoral strength now classified as doubtful.

The latest states in the triumphal procession are Montana and Nevada, having between them seven electoral votes, increasing the total to 374, or 108 more than needed to elect.

The electoral bag of Davis and Bryan remained at 136 and apparently the only chance of increase was in New Mexico.

Coolidge with 374 electoral votes had the following states: Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming.

Davis had 136 electoral votes and the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia.

LaFollette had 13 electoral votes from Wisconsin, and the possibility of a loss from New Mexico and North Dakota.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The ability of the Republican organization to control the new Congress elected Tuesday appeared to hinge on the outcome of Senatorial contests in Minnesota, New Mexico, and Wyoming.

There was little doubt that it would have at least a bare working majority in the House over the Democrats and LaFollette insurgents.

If Republican candidates for the Senate in two or three states still in doubt are victorious and the vacancy in Connecticut is filled by a Republican, a coalition of Democrats and consistent supporters of LaFollette would fall two short of a majority.

To Succeed Gillette
Washington, Nov. 6.—Representative Martin Madden, Republican, of Illinois, announced today that he would be a candidate for speaker of the House to succeed Frederick Gillette who has been elected to the Senate in Massachusetts.

HISTORIC LANDMARK SMOULDERING RUINS

The loss is estimated at $30,000 although the exact figures can not be arrived at as the estate contained antiques and historic relics.

MRS. HARDING BETTER
Marion, O., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Warren G. Harding's condition continues to improve, it was announced today.

Leigh Sheep Company, the Woman's Wear Store, for Friday and Saturday on coats and dresses, and the advertisement of this special offer on the Woman's Interest page of The Advance which will appeal to shoppers. RECOMMEND SAFETY APPLIANCES USED
Newport News, Nov. 6.—The collision Monday between the Chesapeake and Ohio passenger train and a bus in which 11 persons were killed and four seriously injured "was a deplorable accident" two coroners' juries reported last night. They recommended that safety measures or appliances be used at the crossing to avoid a repetition of such accidents.

RETURNS FROM GATES
Gatesville, Nov. 6.—Practically complete returns from Gates County give Port Terminals 50 votes with 999 against the measure.

Davis was given 809 votes, Coolidge 170, and LaFollette none.

Radio Completes First Presidential Campaign

Service Far from Uniform but Served to Keep Streets Crowded in Larger Cities Down to Smallest Proportions Known in Years

By ROBERT T. SMALL
Copyright, 1924, By The Advance

New York, Nov. 6.—With an audience estimated as high as 20,000,000 persons, radio completed its first presidential campaign by announcing the results to every section of the country.

Having been more or less experimental, the service was far from uniform in the various ether belts and was not as full as many had expected. Nevertheless it served to do what many believed would be accomplished—it kept the street crowds in the larger cities down to the smallest proportions known in the last twenty or thirty years of national politics.

Reports from as far West as the Pacific coast received today all agree on this point. Election night, hitherto is a rival of New Year's eve, for color and carnival spirit, resolved itself this year into quiet throngs of spectators around the old fashioned bulletin boards and a few enthusiastic youngsters with horns and rattles trying to supply the din of olden times.

Instead of the street throngs, radio kept the people largely at home. Radio parties were the order of the evening, neighbors with good receiving sets opening their homes—and in many instances their cellars—to friends less fortunately supplied in the elements, both aerial and liquid. In many cities the radio carried the news to immense audiences gathered in halls. Here in New York the hotels were jammed with gay dinner parties and each dining room was "tuned in" on the information which filled the crisp night air.

The streets were not deserted, but the old fashioned marching throngs were gone. By midnight even the most popular gathering point of the city, such as 42nd and Broadway were well nigh deserted. Only on the teeming East Side was there any semblance of the former election night gaiety.

There the bonfires flared, the throngs milled with their thousands of signs and red flags gleamed from many a tenement window. There was a reason for all this old time jubilation down on the East Side. Al Smith had once more been elected governor, making another of his marvelous races in the face of odds which would have crushed the ordinary candidate deep into the mire. Al Smith belongs to the East Side.

He grew up there, and although he stops a great deal now at the fashionable Waldorf Hotel, he still calls the East Side his home and he goes there to vote with and among his old friends. It was the East Side's night. The rest of New York took the results very much for granted. It was the quietest election day and night the city has ever known. It was but the ghost of former years.

Reports from Chicago today stated that radio parties took the "kick" out of election night there and elsewhere through the Middle West. There was little of the old time spirit in the "loop," although a few bands tried to liven things up a bit. There was not even a band in New York. In Chicago the streets crowds were much smaller than usual, but big audiences "listened in" at halls through the city.

The newspaper bulletin boards, formerly about the only means of applying the returns to the public were far from being deserted, but it was evident in nearly every city reporting the results that the radio was claiming a very large share of the public's attention.

Telegrams received from San Francisco today said the interest in the election there had reached the highest point ever known. This was indicated in the first instance by the record breaking vote and by the estimate that fully three fifths of the entire population of the state "listened in" on the returns. The conditions in Oregon and Washington were much the same and both the coast and mountain states, thousands of persons on distant farms, who never before should be able to receive the results on election night were given a radio service which satisfied their every need.

In most sections of the country the broadcasting was so divided and so universal that the owners of the humblest crystal sets, with only a few miles range, occupied most of all that was going on. In broadcasting the election results the radio, however, showed itself once more the hand-maiden of the newspapers and of the news gathering organizations. The broadcasting stations largely were dependent upon the newspapers and upon at least one news association for the information which they disseminated and while the radio greatly speeded up and widened the means of distribution, it contributed not at all to the gathering of the news. The returns filtered in just as of yore and on the radio programs as
