Took Lead in First By Bottomley's Two Bagger With Two Men On Bases

And Then Sewed Up Game and Put It On Ice By Frenzied Batting Spree in the Seventh Frame That Netted the Winner Five Runs

Yankee Stadium, Oct. 9.—(Associated Press.)—Winning their game in the first inning to tie the count for the 1926 series, the St. Louis Cardinals piled up a 10 to 2 score here today that more than counterbalanced the 10 to 5 defeat which they suffered at the hands of the New York Yankees at St. Louis last Wednesday when Babe Ruth went on his rampage.

Stealing the Yankees' own thunder, the Cardinals started smashing them from the time that Holm, first man up, led off with a single to right field. It was Bottomley's double sacker later in the inning that started the scoring, and it was Bell's timely single just a bit later that put across the two runs that put the game on ice for the Cardinals. Not for a moment after that were the Cardinals in danger.

But St. Louis was taking no chances. The Cardinals scored again in the fifth, and in the seventh went on a batting spree that, coupled with an error due to Lazzeri's failure to handle Alexander's ball, netted them five runs, and then they scored again in the ninth. A home run by Bell, scoring Hornsby ahead of him, a single by Thevenow, Meusel's misjudgment of Southworth's high fly which gave the St. Louis batter two bases, and Hornsby's safe hit through the pitcher's box were the high lights in the hectic first half of the seventh inning.

Again as was the case in the first St. Louis victory, the veteran St. Louis pitcher, Grover Cleveland Alexander, was the hero of the game. Alexander mixed his balls too well and put too much stuff on them for the crack bats of the Yankees to handle. He didn't pitch quite the airtight brand of baseball that he did in his first game but what he lacked of it was more than made up for by the stickwork of his team mates.

The Yankees used three pitchers, Shawkey, Shocker and Thomas. The final and deciding game will now be played here Sunday. Two veterans, Alexander for the Cardinals, and Shawkey for the Yankees, went in to pitch the sixth world series game here today with a victory for New York meaning the baseball championship of the world while by winning the Cardinals would prolong the series and force the decisive game tomorrow.

A bright sun shone at the game but a chill breeze swept the field and spectators were wrapped in overcoats.

Following is the play by play description of the game: First Inning Cardinals—Holm led off with a single to right field, but went out on Southworth's grounder to Koenig who threw Holm out at second but failed to make a double play, leaving Southworth safe on first. Hornsby walked, advancing Southworth to second. Bottomley hit a clean tie bagger along the third base line, scoring Southworth and leaving Hornsby on third and Bottomley on second. Bell singled, scoring Hornsby and Bottomley. Hafey and O'Farrell fanned. Three runs, three hits, no errors.

Yankees—Combs went out to Thevenow. Koenig fanned. Ruth went out to Bottomley unassisted. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Inning Cardinals—When Ruth went out at first he was the twenty-fourth Yankee who faced Alexander and went out in order. Thevenow sent a high fly to Combs. Alexander got a hand when he came up. Alexander flied out to Meusel. Holm threw his bat away swinging at Shawkey's curve. He sent up a high foul to Severid. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Yankees—Meusel got a two-

Crashing Fair Gate Leads To Fine On Liquor Charge

As the aftermath of a highly exciting few minutes at the fair grounds Friday night, Jerry Johnson, colored, was fined $10 and costs in recorder's court today on charges of being drunk and of having had liquor in his possession. Johnson submitted freely to the charges, didn't question a statement made by the State's witnesses in the case, and paid his fine cheerfully enough.

Officer Roughton testified that Johnson, in company with several others in a truck, undertook to gain admittance to the fair grounds without the formality of acquiring tickets. Johnson, he said, got midway of the grounds, and ran when fair officials, special deputies and police undertook to take him in custody. Somebody blazed away with a pistol in the midst of things, and the crowd on the carnival midway was plunged into an uproar.

A high bar erected at the end of the midway caught Johnson in the midriff, and flattened him out on the ground. Several of his pursuers pounced on him, and soon had him handcuffed and on his way to jail. It was rumored on the fair grounds that somebody had been shot and killed, and for an hour or more hubbub reigned. The crowd finally quieted down, however, and resumed the business of making merry while they might.

The shot in question is said to have been fired into the air by Richard Gregory, special officer employed at the grounds.

Yankees—Shawkey struck out to Ruth for two bases. The hit would have been good for three bases but struck the fence and Ruth caught it on the rebound, throwing it to second and holding Bottomley on that base. Bell and Hafey fanned and O'Farrell went out on a high infield fly to Dugan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Sixth Inning Cardinals—Bottomley hit to Ruth for two bases. The hit would have been good for three bases but struck the fence and Ruth caught it on the rebound, throwing it to second and holding Bottomley on that base. Bell and Hafey fanned and O'Farrell went out on a high infield fly to Dugan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Yankees—Ruth walked. Meusel went out on a short fly to Holm. Gehrig struck out as Ruth stole second. Lazzeri hit out to Holm. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Seventh Inning Cardinals—Thevenow singled to left field over Meusel's head. Alexander was safe at first on Lazzeri's failure to pick up his slow bunt. Holm attempted to sacrifice but Thevenow was thrown out at third. Southworth hit a high fly to Meusel who misjudged it making it good for two bases for Southworth and scoring Alexander. At this juncture Shawkey was taken out of the box and Shocker began pitching. Hornsby hit safely through the pitcher, scoring Holm and Southworth.

Buttons, Fringe, Embroidery, Decorate This Part Milady's Costume

By AILEEN LAMONT
New York, Oct. 9.—It is not what one has up one's sleeve which counts now so much as what one has on it. Sleeves are being extensively decorated. Buttons placed in rows down the outer side of the sleeve are frequently seen. Fringe attached in a similar way is also used decoratively, either in the same or a contrasting shade. Of course such decorations go with tight sleeves. The loose sleeves gathered in a tight band at the wrist and which is equally stylish, is usually heavily embroidered.

KIWANIANS TAKE STEP TO ADD TO FIRE EQUIPMENT

Representative J. Kenyon Wilson Instructed to Offer Measure in General Assembly for Purpose

Fire Chief Tells Club Alarm System Is Antiquated and Uncertain; Urges Improvements

The initial step toward replacing this city's deplorably antiquated fire alarm system with modern equipment, and toward making badly needed additions to the fire apparatus, was taken Friday night at the regular luncheon of the Kiwanis Club in the passage of a resolution instructing Representative J. Kenyon Wilson, president of the club, to introduce a bill in the next General Assembly authorizing an appropriation for the purpose.

The resolution was passed after an address by Fire Chief Jerome Flora, himself a Kiwanian, in which he gave a highly convincing description of the inadequacy of the alarm system, which was installed in 1906. "I've looked on that board," he said, referring to the contrivance which records the number of the box from which an alarm is sent, "and I've seen the number 999 registered on it. We've only got 16 boxes. What would you do in a case like that? "However, we look out, and see a glow in the sky, and go after it. Somebody wants to know why we didn't get there sooner, and that starts a row. Generally I can settle it peaceably, though."

WILL PUT ELEVATOR IN KRAMER BUILDING

General modernization of the Kramer Building, on East Main street, is in early prospect. The lodge rooms on the third floor are to be converted into attractive offices, according to Robert Kramer, and an elevator is to be installed in the main entrance, with a stairway running around it. In the usual way. The new offices will be arranged in suites as desired by prospective tenants.

Installation of the elevator and offices, and a general modernization of the building which is to accompany these improvements, are to be completed by the latter part of January. Mr. Kramer states, adding that the work will be carried on without inconvenience to the present occupants of the building.

NO OBJECTION TO STATEMENT OF THE FRENCH

France Has Right to Ask for Revision But No Moral Obligation for America to Grant It

AWAIT EMERGENCY
Government Sees No Use in Arguing About Hypothetical Cases Which May Never Arise

By DAVID LAWRENCE
(Copyright, 1926, By The Advance)

Washington, Oct. 9.—Although the American Government would prefer to see no reservations attached to the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement when it is ratified by France there is no objection in principle to the statement by France of its understanding of the debt terms.

Intimations have gone forth that the Washington government will "ignore" the reservations or that they will not be considered "binding." This is merely a question of words for the truth is the American Government will take cognizance of the reservations by declining to permit them to stand in the way of ratification here. Also the question of whether the reservations are "binding" depends altogether on exactly how they are phrased.

Broadly speaking, there is no objection here to a statement on the part of France that if she finds herself unable to pay any annual installment she will ask for reconsideration. France, as a sovereign power, has a right to ask for revision of any pact or agreement no matter whether this was stipulated in the agreement in the first place. The right to ask for a revision does not carry with it any moral obligation on the part of the United States to grant a revision. Even if it did, there is no doubt that the extent of the revision will become a matter of practical examination of facts and the consent in the last analysis to make concessions and alter the terms of the agreement rests with the majority votes of both houses of Congress.

The use of force to collect debts has for a long time been tabooed civilized powers and it is considered doubtful whether the failure on the part of France to pay would be accompanied by anything else except a loss of good will as well as banking credit—both of which considerations are more important to the creditor nation. The second idea, which is expected here to be included in the French reservations is that which attempts to set forth that France will be inclined to ask for a revision whenever payments from Germany are diminished to a certain point. This too, is something on which the American Government will prefer not to make any comment, simply waiting for a specific case to arise.

The line of reasoning employed in official circles here is that the United States has already given an example of its willingness to proclaim a moratorium in periods when the exchange is unfavorable. Thus if French income were to be seriously diminished, her exchange would suffer. Similarly, it would be to the disadvantage of the United States to demand imports of gold at a time when her foreign trade might suffer to an extent far beyond the receipts from foreign debt payments.

Since the whole matter involves reconsideration no matter what the emergency, and since the United States as the creditor remains the judge of whether concessions shall be made, there is no disposition here to quibble about hypothetical contingencies which may never arise but the statement of which in the French reservations may assist the French premier in getting the pact ratified by parliament in the near future.

Board of Directors Accepts Bids of J. E. Brannan Construction Company After Long Session

ARCHITECT HELPS

W. L. Stoddart Credited With Having Saved Hotel Corporation Entire Salary by Suggestions

Contracts for construction of the new Virginia Dare Hotel, biggest community enterprise ever undertaken in this part of the State, were let late last night at an aggregate figure of $396,500, it was announced today by C. O. Robinson, president of the Elizabeth City Hotel Corporation.

The J. E. Brannan Construction Company, of Raleigh, was the low bidder on general construction of the nine-story hotel building, the Main street arcade and the garage, the total being $320,000. Contract for the plumbing, heating and wiring was let to the Standard Engineering Company, of Washington, D. C., at $76,500.

In the successful bid, the hotel building is figured at $266,000, the arcade at $44,000, and the garage at $14,000. However, a margin in excess of $4,000 was effected by an arrangement whereby the contractor will put up $50,000 in approved bonds as security, instead of the usual insurance bond. This step was taken with the approval of W. L. Stoddart, of New York, architect who designed the hotel. Mr. Stoddart was in conference with the board of directors of the hotel throughout the session, and is credited with having saved the entire cost of his services through that and other suggestions for lowering the cost of the project.

The board met yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and remained in session continuously until 11:30 o'clock, when the business in hand was concluded. Sandwiches were served in lieu of supper, in order to save time.

In all, there were 20 to 30 general contractors and sub-contractors at the meeting, with keen rivalry between them for the contract.

The total cost of the hotel project, everything included, was approximately $575,000, according to Mr. Robinson, who explains that the entire project will be handled by a single corporation, and not separately, as some of the stockholders have been inclined to think. Mr. Robinson pointed out today that the hotel was being constructed with a view to meeting the needs of Elizabeth City for many years to come. He reminded that the foundations, for instance, are to be piled, so as to make the building sufficiently substantial to permit of future additions, if needed.

The arcade building is to have an attractive stone front, with marble and bronze fixtures inside, with the idea of making the structure handomely in keeping with other buildings in that block, which is the heart of the downtown retail district.
