WHOLE NO. 799.

From the Plag of Our Union. THE PONY PHAETON:

LOVE ON THE ROAD.

BY FRANCIS V. DURIVAGE.

Rub that horse down well, and don't feed him till he is perfectly coot."

These words were addressed to the hostler of a hotel in Brighton, by a handsome, mid-dle aged gentleman, dressed in the height of fashion, as he alighted from an elegant black horse, and tossed the rein to the atten

'And now,' said the horseman, addressing a waiter, show me into a private par-

A well-dressed man, who rides a handsone ung, is always sure of a warm welcome at a public house all the world over. Our friend soon found himself in a neat well furnished parlor, with flowers in vases on the mantel-piece, and the blinds, for it was a summer's afternoon, carefully closed, while he open windows permitted a free current of air to circulate through the apartment.

The waiter remained standing near the 'Any orders, sir ?' No yet stay ; who came in that handsome pony phacton I saw standing in the yard? 'A lady, sir.' 'Ah!'

'A young widow, sir.'

She's very handsome, sir. Go along, and shut the door after you. muttered the traveller, testily.

'A woman and a widow?' he soliloquized.
'I'm glad I don't know her! I am certainly very fortunate to have attained the age of forty without any feminine entanglement. -Independent pecuniarily—not ill-looking I think I must admit that I should make what those busy-bodies, the match-makers call a grand catch. But, thank my stars! I've preserved my independence and content so far, and I'm not likely to succumb now. No, no! Jack Campion was born to live and die an old bachelor. And now for the newspaper while my horse is baiting."

In the meantime another horseman had alighted at the hotel, from a horse recking with sweat, and literally unable to put one loot before the other. The same hostler-an Irishman-made his appearance. 'Pat!' said the rider -- a young man, fasionably attired-'put my mare in the stable, and do the best you can for her.'

Och! Misther Travers, an' she's kilt intires I'm afraid so." What the devil made ye crowd her so?

'Yes, sur Bill, show the gintleman into the ladies' parloor; he wants to see Mrs. 'Ah, Bell I" said the young man "you

No matter. Is my sister here?"

here ? Yes,' replied a beautiful young woman, rising to meet him. But what's the matter with you? 'Nothing, Bell-nothing.'

Something is certainly the matter. You look flushed and excited. 'I've been riding hard.'
'That's not all. O, tell me what has happened.1 I must be brief, then, for I am pursued." 'Pursued ?'

Yes. You know that fellow who insulted you in the couch the other day, replied the young man, Well, I have been on his track for more then a week. I met him to-day in the street, and gave him a confounded horsethe street, and gave him a confounded horse-whipping. I handled him very roughly, I'm afraid. He instantly got out a warrant against me, and not wishing to be dragged into court till I was ready. I mounted my horse and gave the officer the slip. Perhaps I'd better have waited and braved it out; but having taken this step, I'm bound to baffle them. To-morrow I'll surrender myself. Now Bell, if your pony will take me to our uncle's in five minutes, I'm your man.' 'Poor Charley couldn't doi',' said the lady.

Then I'll make another arrangement. Byand-by, Bell, I'll see you at the vitla.'

From the crawing-room the young man rushed into the stable. Pat,' said he, give me a horse-a geod one.'

Sorra the horse we've got in the stable, except this black, and that belongs to a gintleman who came here just afore yeez. Och. but he's a good one, tho', yer anner, 2,40 to a sicint. 'Pil borrow him,' said Traverse, jumping on his back. 'Tell Bell to drive the gen tleman to the villa, and he shall have been But, yer 'anner!' remonstrated the hostler. In vain. Traverse had set spurs to the horse, and was off like a thunderbolt.

'O, wirra l wirra l wirra l gaid the hostler. What'll become uy me? Um ruined and undone intirely !"

undone intirely! Shortly afterwards, Mrs. Leslie rang for her phaeton, and at the same time Mr. Campion. the old bachelor, ordered his horse. The pony came round to the front door, and the young widow stepped lightly into the phaeton, and took the reins.

'All right,' she said, nodding, with a smile, to Patrick. Give him his head.

'Och! it's all wrong, my lady,' replied the hostler, keeping tight hold of the rein. Your carriage can take two inside.

'Very well; but I came alone.'

Very well; but I came alone.'
You've got to take a passenger,'

What do you mean?' Sch! wirra! your brother's been stelin's Stealing a horse?

'Poor Charley couldn't do i',' said the lady.
